WORKING WOMEN.

The Bad Effect of Convict Labor in New Jersey.

Two Thousand Complaining Girls—How Their Wages Have Been Reduced to a Mere Pittance—Address of a Timid Toiler—An Appeal to the Public.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 11.—The shirt makers of Newark, N. J., numbering about 2,000 girls, are complaining of the convict labor and contract system, by means of which, it is alleged, wages are reduced below living rates. The convict labor complained of in particular is performed in the House of the Good Shepherd, where the inmates, under the charge of the Sisters of Charity, are taught to become expert operators, and are able to work for about half the wages that the shop workers are now receiving. The contract work, it is claimed, is more beneficial, and by its means the girls say they have suffered repeated reductions in their wages, so that now they are scarcely able

TO MAKE AN HONEST LIVELIHOOD.

The way in which it is worked is to send large parcels of shirts all along the various towns and villages on the Pennsylvania and Jersey Central roads and distribute them to the farmers' wives and daughters, who, during their idle time in the winter, are glad to work for anything. Recently several of the older hands employed in the larger shops have addressed a memorial to their employers asking them in the name of charity, to give them an opportunity to earn sufficient to keep body and soul together. To this appeal no attention was paid, but instead it is claimed more employment was given to the inmates of the reformatories, and the number of shop hands was reduced. The condition of the shop workers was then brought to the notice of the ladies of Newark, and they resolved to correct the grievances if possible, but their efforts were in vain, and now the girls have combined together to obtain redress if possible. A visit to the various shirt factories, which number about twenty, revealed the fact that the workers were in a

REALLY DEPLORABLE STATE.

The superintendent of one of the largest factories was engaged in making out his weekly pay-roll when he was asked for information. He volunteered to answer all questions relating to the condition of the employes. He admitted that the convict system was injurious to the interests of his trade. It caused a competition that forced all those not employing it out of the market. "Just look here," he said, "it costs us $1 50 to have a dozen shirts laundried in the regular way, while the same will be done for sixty cents at any of the prisons in this State. That item alone makes it compulsory for us to employ convict labor. Again, the work for which we pay $2 to shop hands will be eagerly sought after by contractors for less than $1, and so on through the different departments of the business. Do you wish to look at our pay rolls of last week? You can see for yourself

WHAT THE EARNINGS ARE."

Glancing over the long list it was found that out of 100 about twenty made $2 a week and thirty between $2 and $6, while the remainder earned between $6 and $9. The latter were the most skilled, who had had years of experience.

"Do you not consider this meagre pay?"

"Yes, it is; but we can do nothing else. If we did not avail ourselves of convict labor, at least for our cheaper goods, we might as well go out of business at once, and our efforts would only lead to increasing the contractors' vast store of wealth, gotten from this source."

The senior member of the firm of Wheeler & Alling, was of the opinion that the state of affairs was deplorable, but they could not help it, unless in some way the public compels the prison authorities to regulate their rates in harmony with those paid for honest labor. At present many firms offer their goods at nearly fifty per cent less than they were able to do by reason of their

EMPLOYING CONVICT HANDS.

All the other firms visited told similar stories.

Last night delegates from the shops met for the purpose of discussing the situation. About forty modestly-attired girls occupied seats in a small hall on Broad street. Mr. M. E. Frost, Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, occupied the platform and asked them to tell the true state of affairs as they existed at first. None of them ventured to speak for fear that some spy might be present and occasion their discharge from employment. At last one girl, with a determined face, arose, and addressing her sisters, she said:

"How can we afford to make shirts for $1 30 a dozen and live? We can't do it. They are trying to reduce us to abject poverty, and they will succeed if we do not rise and object now. We want it understood that we do not wish to rob the girls in the Reform Institute of employment, but we wish them to do it at the same rate we are getting."

After this address a resolution was passed, asking the public to co-operate with the shop-workers in securing the

ABOLITION OF STATES PRISON LABOR

in its present condition. They especially mentioned the House of the Good Shepherd and the Jamesburg reformatory. After the meeting adjourned one of the girls gave an interesting account of her condition. She said: "Sometime ago I could earn between $16 and $18 a week, whereas now with more labor, $6 or $7 is more than my average pay. This decrease applies to all, and really I shudder to think what our fate will be in the future."

"What do those who take work to their homes usually earn?"

"About $2 50 a week; certainly not above three $3. I don't know of many instances either where they earn as much as that. Why, some months ago a friend of mine, who used to make good wages, applied at one of the shops for work to take home, and they gave her some at the end of the week. She has earned but $2 37 for the last two months. This girl has remained idle, vainly looking for work where she could make living pay."

Those girls who listened while these remarks were made, repeatedly nodded their assent as the amounts paid for the work were mentioned.

A New Telegraph Company.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, September 11.—Eugene J. O'Conner, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers, and one of the directors of the new telegraph company, will open a business office in this city this week, preliminary to the establishment of the company's lines. He has just returned from New York, where he has been engaged in perfecting the organization of the new company. He said to-day that the new company has met with success far beyond the most sanguine expectations of its projectors, and that all the capital needed is assured. He shows documents proving that two hundred members of the Produce Exchange in Baltimore have signified their intention to take stock in the new company. Similar assurances have also been received from other cities.

A POST-DISPATCH representative called upon Treasurer Converse, of the American Rapid Company, to-day, with reference to the rumored connection, by sale or consolidation, of the Rapid with other organizations. Mr. Converse, while admitting that negotiations of an important nature are in progress, stated that he was not at liberty to tell the public at present the character of these negotiations. "By Friday or Saturday of this week," he continued, "I shall be able to give you something definite regarding our plans and prospects.

FISHERMEN DROWNED.

A Small Fishing Schooner Wrecked—Nine Men Missing.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

HALIFAX, N. S., September 11.—A telegram from Barrington this evening states that the fishing schooner Restless, off Lunenburg, has just been to wed into that port in a wrecked condition, having been picked up at sea without a living human being on board. The Restless sailed from Lunenburg several weeks ago on a fishing trip to Bank Guaro, and had on board a crew of nine men. When found at sea there were the bodies of

FOUR DROWNED FISHERMEN

in the cabin, which was full of water, but there was no sign of the five others. The vessel was filled with water and had her masts completely carried away. Her bulwarks were badly damaged throughout, and gave evidence of having had a fearful experience from the fury of the storm. Not a boat was to be seen, but it is hardly possible that the other members of the crew, whose bodies were not discovered, could have escaped death by abandoning the vessel in such a violent tempest as they had apparently met. Those whose remains were brought into port have not as yet been identified, the men being unknown at Barrington. They had probably taken refuge from the storm in the cabin, and the water that they perished, being unable to escape, while the others, who were likely clinging to the rigging, were most likely washed off and lost in the raging ocean. The Restless was captained by G. Parker of Lunenburg County and owned by W. Marman Reinhart of Lahava. She was twenty-five tons register and was launched at Vogler's Cove two years ago. It is reported that among those on the vessel was a young son of the owner and another relative.

POURED IN UPON THEM SO FAST

SPIRITUAL INSTRUCTION.

Mrs. Evans' Excuse for Her Intimacy With a Revivalist.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, September 11.—An exceedingly interesting and novel case came before the Supreme Court for Norfolk County to-day, in which Jackson L. Evans, a revivalist, and two women, Mrs. Catherine B. Cobb and Miss Katie L. Whiting, all of Wrentham, are involved. The complainant charges Evans with undue intimacy with both Mrs. Cobb and Miss Whiting. Mrs. Cobb is about 22 years old and very handsome. Miss Whiting is about 20 years of age, in her arms

SHE HELD A YOUNG CHILD.

Evans is about 45 years old, and about four years ago came to Wrentham and at once became conspicuous as a preacher. Miss Whiting and Mrs. Cobb were converts to Evans' ideas. At the trial to-day, Mrs. Cobb's husband told a strange story of the peculiar doctrines inculcated by Evans. He said that Evans converted him, but he soon found that Evans was monopolizing the time and affections of his wife. He testified as follows: "I said I would not allow such actions; my wife asserted she was doing right

ACCORDING TO SPIRITUAL INSTRUCTIONS.

During this time Miss Whiting had two children; I have since heard she had another child in jail. I remonstrated with Evans in relation to the unlawful acts of my wife. He said he would knock my brains out. I did not live with my wife after that. I thought that Miss Whiting, whom I took to live with me, would prove my salvation. Evans told me that instead of that she was leading me straight to the pit."

SATISFY THE SPORTS.

Harry Hill's Declaration of War—Slade and Mitchell Called.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 11.—To-day Mitchell and Slade should have fought near Kansas City, Mo., but owing to the threatened interference of officials, the fight for the time is off. Last night Slade was at Harry Hill's resort, as is usual with him when in New York. He conversed with "Hen" Rice, Jem Mace, Joe "Nixey," Soap McAlpine and Harry Hill, and about 9 o'clock left for home. Soon after his departure Harry Hill sent the following telegram to "Billy" Madden and Bishop at No. 119 West Sixth street, Kansas City:

"I finally decide that Mitchell and Slade must fight within 100 miles of New Orleans, as I am assured no interference will take place there. The fight to come off on Tuesday, October 23, next. Either man failing to appear in the ring between 8 a. m and 12 noon on that day to forfeit. Nothing can alter my decision, as I act only in fairness to both parties and to the sporting public."

Jem Mace said to a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH that the fight would take place if Mitchell did not back out. Slade was anxious to fight, and would continue his course of training until he left for New Orleans. The date of his departure will not be settled until a definite reply as to Mitchell's further movements are received from "Billy" Madden.

His Lordship's Guard.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, September 11.—Upon the arrival of Lord Chief Justice Coleridge in this country he was met by four United States Secret Service detectives, and has been constantly under the eye of these men in all his travels about the country. He is accompanied by these four detectives during his visit to Boston. They follow closely wherever he goes, as a rule, but not always. One occupies a seat with the driver on the carriage in which the timid Lord rides, the rest following in another. Whether on foot, in a coach or on the rails these men never relax their vigilance. It is understood that the detectives were furnished upon application of the British Minister at Washington on the ground that there was no knowing what injury the Fenians or some other wicked people might do to the old man.

Borrowing Commercial Methods.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, September 11.—M. Herisson, Minister of Commerce, has commissioned M. Laudelet, Vice President of the National Union of Commerce and Industry, to go to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago, to study American manufactures, and report whether improved methods may not be borrowed by France, with a view to the counteraction of the formidable competition of American with French products throughout the world.

SICK OF SALOMON.

The Insurgents of Hayti Issue a Manifesto.

Their President will be Made to Descend from the Throne—An Engagement Results in the Government Troops Being Run from the Battle-Field—"Long Live Liberty."

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 11.—Information was received yesterday from Jacmal, the seat of the Haytien revolutionist, showing that Gen. J. Rovigo Barjou, Chief Executive of the revolutionary movement in the Jacmal district, as he styles himself, Gen. Cleovil Mode, head of the revolutionary forces of the Commune, and other insurgent leaders have published a manifesto in which, after reciting what hopes were based on the election of President Salomon in 1879, and how the latter had shamefully betrayed them ask: "Gen. Salomon, what have you done with our liberty? This principle of our political life has been overthrown. The person of each citizen has become, as it were, the property of the agents of your Government, organized into a vast association of spies. You have created and organized a system of denunciation which has estranged, sacrificed, and even the best citizens. You have deprived us of our civic justices, and in their place instituted martial tribunals. You have authorized domiciliary visits and have had our property confiscated in violation of the Constitution, your own pet child, which you did not know how to respect." After charging the President of the Republic of Hayti with further high crimes and misdemeanors, this extraordinary document, which seems to have been framed on the model of our declaration of Independence, adds: "That, Gen. Salomon, is what the Republic reproaches you with. The free cities which have revolted have told you so. Others, like Jacmal, will join in the insurrection to tell you the same. All the infamies you have committed command us to make you descend from the seat of power. We feel that you neither can nor ought to remain longer at the head of a country of which

PLACED ON THE STOOL OF INFAMY

YOU ARE AN UNWORTHY SON.

False pride, ambition and evil counsellors still prevent you from surrendering the soiled chair of the Presidency, but we repudiate you because you have been false to your platform, false to your Constitution and false to our nation. It is to have a Government more in conformity with our aspirations and the needs of a free and suffering people that we take up arms before God and the nation. We will not lay them down except with our last breath. The revolution born this day will continue until the source of the evils actually afflicting Hayti are removed." The manifesto concludes as follows: "Haytiens, and you inhabitants of Jacmel, who have a soul sufficiently proud to hate despotism, a heart sufficiently noble and free to live by freedom, to whatever faction you may belong, join, and with one resolute voice exclaim, 'Long live liberty. Death to tyranny.'"

That this inflammatory manifesto was not without its effect is shown by the report of an engagement which took place at a spot known under the name of Malacy in the commune of Merigave, between the Government and the insurgents, and in which, according to the account given by Gen. Mode, the Revolutionists were successful. Describing the battle the General says:

"Our troops were under the command of the brave Generals Vilfort Mascary, Pelevia Sannon and Dorelus Muscadins. More than were in the camp, and Generals Lagene, Cesar Steius, Louis Blanc and Jean Louis Siracius, aid-de-camps of Gen. Salomon, directed their operation. But after a short fusilade the officers and men fled, leaving on the field of battle arms and munitions, supplies, flags, medicine chests, horses, and, in fact, all the spoils, which our brave soldiers brought back into their camp. More than a hundred killed and wounded remained on the ground. Their valorous general, Troselin Piuviouse, was also killed, and our generous friends permitted the latter's relatives to remove his remains. There has not been a single victim from our side. Our soldiers came out victorious from this battle."

300 OF THE ENEMY

Gen. Mode uses the occasion for the following exhortation: "Fellow Citizens—Close up your ranks; have confidence in the brave men who are for the Divine hand covers them with all His protection. All honor to the gallant generals and their valiant soldiers, who will never cease to pursue this work until the day of triumph or nothing. Fellow-citizens, our cause is just. The glorious day will soon arrive when the tyrant will fall from the President's chair that he has so disgraced."

Three days later General Baryon, calling attention to the victory at Malacy, publishes the fact that the conquering troops are now rapidly marching towards Midagoane, the illustrious cradle of the legitimate revolution.

NOT MARY.

Miss Churchill Not in El Paso as Reported.

The Sensational Story Denied—Miss Mary Burns the Party Alleged to be the Missing Girl.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, September 11.—The sensational story regarding the presence in this city of Miss Churchill is thought to have originated from the presence of Miss Mary Burns, whose mother lives in Chihuahua, and who had just left the convent at Austin in that State to join her mother at Chihuahua. She left here on the 29th, and was HEAVILY VEILED.

An officer of this city saw her on the train and talked with her, and is positive she is not Miss Churchill, as he has seen the latter's picture. Miss Burns resembles the description of Miss Churchill, but is well known in this city and stopped a week or more with the family of a German butcher living here.

BOY BURGLARS.

Their Daring Exploits and Successful Steals.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

RED BANK, N. J., September 11.—For several weeks the farmers living in the vicinity of New Monmouth have been visited every night by burglars. It is believed that the thieves are four young residents of Red Bank, who have been missed recently from their old haunts. All the persons suspected are scarcely more than boys, the oldest being not yet 20 years of age.

The residence of William V. Janover, on the Middletown bank of the Shrewsbury River, was entered a few weeks ago and robbed of a large sum of money and a quantity of valuables. Then the residence of Peter Y. Layton at Clay Pitt Creek was entered and $300 worth of clothing and silverware were stolen. Harvey Jenkins, a music teacher living near New Monmouth, was robbed of a quantity of clothing and $100. John Hendrickson, a farmer in the same neighborhood, had his barn broken open and a quantity of grain and dressed poultry stolen, and other farmers have lost bags of corn and grain, farming implements, poultry, blankets and produce. A horse was stolen from under the sheds at Mount Pleasant, near Matawan. Although this is some distance from the present haunts of the boy burglars, they are supposed to be the thieves. The latest and was committed at the farm house of John Curtis, near Keyport, on Saturday night. Boldly entering the room where farmer Curtis was sleeping the thieves took the sleeper's clothes, a watch and about five hundred dollars in money, which was in a tin box, in a cupboard. The burglar then pulled from under the bed an old chest, in which Mr. Curtis kept his papers, and carrying it to a neighboring orchard broke it open. The chest contained checks, drafts, notes etc., to the amount of nearly $3,000, which they then carried away with them. Mr. Curtis was not apprised of the robbery until he awoke in the morning and missed his watch.

IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

State Detective Frank Patterson, who is Chief Marshal of Red Bank, has been on the track of the thieves for some time. The marauders becoming bolder the citizens of Middletown Township have subscribed a sum for the service of several detectives to assist Marshal Patterson, who expects to run them to earth in a few days.

FUN FOR FERRY.

A Man With a Passion For Marrying—His Late Arrest.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, MASS., September 11.—Richard Ferry, alias "Mountain Dick," is under arrest in Cambridge. It is charged that he has four wives. He is a native of Cambridge, is about 31 years old, intelligent and very good-looking. When quite young he went to the Western frontier and joined the regular army. Previous to leaving Cambridge he had been married twice, but he became enamored of an Indian squaw of the Cheyennes, and in order to marry her he applied for a discharge, which was refused. He soon after deliberately shot off the forefinger of his right hand and he was consequently discharged. He immediately married the Indian and returned to his father's home in Cambridge. The threats of relatives of his other wives caused a sudden flight and the squaw was left behind. She soon after disappeared and her fate is unknown. Ferry again went West and was a member of Custer's command at the Little Big Horn battle. Shortly after he turned up in Cambridge and had another wife with him. Who she was or where she came from is not known, but she clung to him for some time and was finally compelled to leave him or starve, and is now earning a living in a factory near Cambridgeport. Ferry refuses to make any statement and appears wholly indifferent.

A RELIALE REVIEW.

Injury Done to the Crops by the Recent Frosts.

CHICAGO, September 11.—The Farmers' Review, from very extended advices, will publish in to-morrow's issue the following comment on the injury to the corn crop by the recent frosts. Frosts of greater or less severity have been experienced throughout Minnesota, Wisconsin, northern and Northeastern Iowa, Northern Illinois and Indiana and the entire State of Michigan and are causing serious injury to late corn. This injury it is impossible at this writing to accurately determine. In all the territory visited by frosts some fields were so fully matured as to receive no damage. In many parts corn on the high grounds escaped injury, while that on the low grounds was severely cut. It will be safe, we think, to estimate the injury in the territory named at 25 per cent of the estimated crop. It may exceed this estimate. Through out the same territory other minor crops, such as tobacco, hops, tomatoes and other tender garden vegetables, as well as grapes, were greatly injured or utterly ruined. In Kansas, Nebraska, Southern and Western Iowa, Southern Illinois and Indiana, and all other portions of the corn producing country no material injury is reported.

FATAL POISONING.

The Work of an Enraged Colored Woman—Mixed With Coffee.

CAIRO, ILL., September 11.—Last night a colored woman named Kate Colton, who, having a spite against Alf. Miller because he would not marry her, went to the house of Louis McMurray, Miller's father-in-law, and asked for a cup of coffee. Finding none made she volunteered to make a pot to get one herself. She was granted permission. After making it she left the house and said she would return soon for the cup. Not returning, the family finished cooking supper and sat down to eat. In a short time they were all taken sick and one named Jerry Thompson died. His wife is very low and Alf Miller and Louis McMurray are dangerously ill. Dr. Sullivan was called and pronounced that they all had been poisoned. Kate Colton is under arrest.

LATER REPORT.

CAIRO, ILL., 11 P. M., September 11.—Kate Colton, the woman who poisoned the McMurray family and was arrested, took poison while in jail and will probably die.

New England Crops.

BOSTON, September 11.—Crop returns from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont show a fair condition. Probably the yield in Maine will reach: Wheat 712,598 bushels, oats 761,713, barley 293,227, buckwheat 300,000, rye 30,000.

In Vermont grain of all kinds looks finely. We give the estimated yield of the principal crops: Potatoes 3,500,000 bushels, oats 3,093,000, wheat 312,000, corn 2,056,000, barley 273,500, buckwheat 370,000. The season has been favorable for the production of butter and cheese. Wool will probably fall below the average.

In New Hampshire the returns indicate a large yield of cereals and potatoes. Following are the estimates: Corn 1,325,121, oats 1,072,141, barley 77,287, wheat 174,806, rye 35,093, potatoes 3,480,000.

Severe Wind-Storm.

WILMINGTON, N. C., September 11.—A severe wind-storm has been prevailing here for the past thirty hours. The wind reached its highest velocity, of forty miles an hour, at 7 o'clock this morning. The velocity now is thirty-two. No serious damage is reported in the city or harbor. The Signal Service telegraph wires are all down. No news yet from the coast.

Forest Fires.

PETERSBURG, VA., September 11.—Forest fires destroyed a large quantity of vauable timber lands, undergrowth and cord wood in adjacent counties. At last accounts they are still burning. The fires extend over a large area. In some instances wheat fields have been destroyed by the flames. It is feared considerable game has been burned.

Died in Each Other's Arms.

CINCINNATI, September 11.—Four more bodies were found this morning at the Dreman fire. They fell to pieces when attempts were made to lift them and are wholly unrecognisable, except by bits of clothing that is not at all conclusive. Two of the victims appeared to have died clasped in each other's arms.

Drowned at Sea.

TROY, N. Y., September 11.—Howard Stevens and George Brown were drowned in Lake Champlain, near Plattsburg, Sunday, by the capsizing of a sail boat. A. J. Smith, one of the party, drifted ten hours, landing on an island. He reached Plattsburg last evening.

CLARENCE HITE.

Confession of the Famous Member of the James Gang.

How the Winston and Blue Cut Robberies were Planned and Executed—Frank James was Present on Both Occasions—Conductor Westfall was Shot by Jesse.

Special Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, September 11.—In consequence of the recent publication of Dick Liddell's statement regarding the history of the James gang, Police Commissioner Craig has given out the confession of Clarence Hite, made to the officers at Jefferson City and which is published to-day. Clarence Hite, the youngest of the band, was captured in Kentucky shortly after Liddells surrender. Being confronted by the evidence of his complicity in the Winston and Blue Cut train robberies he pleaded guilty in the Daviess County Criminal Court and was sentenced to twenty-five years. This confession was made before Gov. Crittenden, Commissioner Craig and Sheriff Timberlake of Clay County. Soon after Hite was incarcerated in the penitentiary, and before the death of Jesse James last February, he was pardoned on account of failing health and died a few days after. He made a statement just before death, a report of which was published at the time, which corresponds substantially with that published to-day. This account of the movements of the gang during Hite's connection with it corresponds in all the essential particulars with Liddell's story and corroborates in detail all of Liddell's testimony at Gallatin implicating Frank James in the Winston robbery. It also accounts for Frank's participation in the Blue Cut robbery as told by Liddell, and for which James is yet to be tried. Charley Ford took part in the Blue Cut robbery and is expected to testify, as also will Liddell, when that case is heard.

Hite's Confession.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, September 11.—Clarence Hite's confession has been given to the public by Police Commissioner Craig, in whose hands it has been since that worthy was pardoned from the penitentiary and was sent home to die. He says:

I MET THE JAMES BOYS

just after the war. My first act of lawlessness was at Winston, Mo. I came to Missouri in May, 1881, Was with Jesse's wife, who came from Nelson County, Ky. She was staying there at Donny Pence's; he was Sheriff of the county. Frank was at Alex. Sears', and Jesse and Dick Liddell were at Bob Hall's. My wife, Jesse's wife and her two children came on to Kansas City. When we reached Kansas City we stopped at Charley McBride's. I went over to Mrs. Samuels', and she came over to see Jesse's wife. I stayed over there for about one week, when Jesse and Dick Liddel came. They stayed there off and on until the last of July, 1881. The Winston train robbery was in July 15, 1881, Frank arrived at Mrs. Samuels' one week after Jesse and Dick did. No one came with Frank. He remained there until the robbery. When the robbery was planned at Mrs. Samuels' there were present Jesse, Frank, Dick Liddel, my brother, Wood Hite and myself. We five were the only ones engaged in the robbery. I do not know where my brother is. I last saw him last November at home. His name is Robert Woots Hite. He left home without saying where he was going. We robbed the train about a month after the robbery was planned. We went there once before to do it, but all got wet, and out in the woods, and his face swelled up so that he could hardly see, and we gave it up for the time being. Jesse got a man who lived about a half mile from the Hannibal and St. Joe Road to take him to Hamilton in a buggy. Jesse took the train at Hamilton and came on to Kansas City. Frank helped him in the buggy. When the party first left Mrs. Samuels, Jesse, Frank, Dick Liddell and my brother rode down to Ray County to Mrs. Bolton's, and I came on to Kansas City to get some newspapers and cartridges. I got them and went down to Ray County to Mrs. Bolton's. I got there one night and left the next morning for Richmond, Mo., and then left for Plattsburg. Frank, Jesse, Dick and my brother went on to Gallatin. I went to Plattsburg to get a bill changed and there took the Rock Island train for Gallatin. We all went out into the woods and had a talk. They got on their horses and went to Kidder and I got on the train and went there. I went there on the train because I had no horse. When the party was at Mrs. Bolton's her three children and Chas. Ford, Capt. Ford, Bob Ford and another Ford, a great big fellow, were there. Neither of the Fords nor Doctor Samuels nor his wife knew what was brewing. When the party was at Gallatin they stayed out in the woods. After Jesse was put on the cars I rode his horse and Frank and Dick led my brother's. We went down near Mirabile and went from there to Mrs. Samuels'. Dick and Frank went from there to Mrs. Bolton's. My brother got on the train and a week or so afterwards. Jesse wrote to John Samuels to bring his horse over to Kansas City. He (Samuels) did so the following Sunday. He received the letter the preceding Saturday. Jesse and his wife were keeping house in Kansas City. I went over to Kansas City on the Fourth of July, 1881—on the Monday after Samuels took the horse over. Jesse rode over to Mrs. Samuels' on the night of July 4, and John Samuels returned that night. Jesse said he at Kansas City. He said he came by some newspaper office and read the Garfield bulletins.

JESSE CAUGHT THE TOOTH-ACHE

WENT TO MRS. SAMUELS'

Here Hite stated that Jesse James presented a watch to a prominent citizen, whose name, Mr. Craig stated, it was not necessary to mention, as it had nothing to do with the Winston robbery or the gang.

A few days after Jesse arrived at Mrs. Samuels' Frank and Dick came up from Ray County. They got there Wednesday. We all remained there about one week. Frank and Dick went back to Mrs. Bolton's before going to Winston. They came back again to Mrs. Samuels' before going to Winston. When we started to Winston we left on the Sunday night before the robbery, about 8 o'clock. We went above Plattsburg about six miles the first night. A few miles from Mrs. Samuels' we met a man riding a whitish horse, whom Jesse said he knew. He said his name was Pence. We arrived at a point above Plattsburg at daylight. We laid down in the woods and went to sleep; sleeping until about sunrise. We then crossed the Rock Island road and went close to a little town, and Dick and myself went in and bought

SOME CANDY AND STUFF.

Dick had a shoe put on his horse. This was Monday morning. The rest went on outside of town and stopped. We next went through the edge of Cameron, and Frank, my brother and myself went on up to an oat field; pulled down some shocks and laid down, while Jesse and Dick went into town and bought some sausage and looked at the Rock Island train. We three slept until daylight. Jesse and Dick came and waked us up about 11 o'clock, and went past us down into the woods. We then went on closer to Cameron and stayed in the woods till late in the evening, then went on to Winston. Frank and myself went on through Winston and the rest came afterwards. We all went down into some woods below Winston that night. Tuesday Frank and myself went back to Winston and got something to eat. went back then to where the rest were and I slept till morning. Frank and myself then went above Winston, about five miles northeast, and had our horses shod. We all then went up near Cameron, intending to rob the train there, but there were too many people got on and we went back in the woods and slept all the night of the 13th. Got up before sunrise the 14th. We went to Gallatin that night. We intended to rob the train at Gallatin, but we hitched our horses too far away and the train passed. Thursday night we slept in the woods near Gallatin. Friday morning we got up about 9 o'clock. Frank and myself went together. Jesse and my brother went together and Dick by himself. We went to Winston Thursday night. We staid about one and a half miles from Gallatin. Got to Winston about sundown. Went into town after hitching our horses about three-quarters of a mile out in the woods east of Winston. The horses were hitched on the south side of the road. We were at Winston when the train came along.

JESSE WAS OUR CAPTAIN.

Our stations were as follows: Jesse and my brother got on the front platform of the express car. The understanding was that Dick and I, as soon as Jesse or Frank should pull the bell rope, were to climb over the coal tender and pull down on the engineer and fireman and make them obey orders. As soon as they rang the bell, which was before we reached the bridge, we climbed over the coal and made them stop the train. The understanding was that we were to stop the train any time before reaching the bridge. Jesse, Frank and Wood were to go in and rob the cars at the first stoppage. Frank ran round to the side and seized the baggageman by the leg and pulled him out of the car. They then commenced firing into the car and the expressman opened the doors. They went in and robbed the car. All this took about half an hour. We got $126 and some cents apiece. Jesse said the conductor started to draw his pistol and he—Jesse—told him if he drew it he would kill him. He did not desist and was shot. Jesse did not know the conductor. There is no truth in the story that because he had carried Pinkerton's detectives out to his mother's, Mrs. Samuels, house. The stonemason was shot accidentally."

JESSE KILLED HIM,

Then follows the history of the retreat from Winston:

"We divided the plunder the next morning after the robbery, in the little wood before spoken of. Jesse said he was sorry he had killed the conductor, but when he learned that he had brought the train to Mrs. Samuels' (this means the time of the explosion which shattered Mrs. Samuels' arm so severely years ago) he said he was glad of it. Several days after the robbery Charlie Ford drove to Kansas City with Jesse, who was disguised as a woman. Jesse went to his house on Tracy avenue, and Frank and Clarence went toward Independence. Jesse was then going by the name of Jackson. After a few weeks the robbery of the

was planned, and Hite describes it as follows:

"We were to blockade the track with rock, and stop the train, if possible, by waving a lantern with a piece of red flannel around it. Jesse and myself were to take the north side of the train. We were to keep the people from coming out by firing, etc. Frank and Dick were to take the south side of the train and Wood and Charley were to flag the train, take out the engineer make him break open the express car door, and they, Charley and Wood, were to rob it. This arrangement was carried out. After Charley and Woot came out of the car they told Jesse they did not have any money. Jesse then said: 'We had better rob the passenger.' Then they started through the train, beginning at the smoker and going to the rear. Wood carried the bag—a common meal sack. Charley went in front with a pistol in each hand and made the passengers deliver up their valuables and put them in the sack. I stood at the front door of each car. Charley went through to prevent their being shot in the back. When we reached the chair-car Frank got on. He did not go through the car. The entire party went to Jesse's house after the robbery. Charley Ford and Frank James went to Cincinnati and were there when Clarence Hite was arrested.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

A Chinese Mob "On a High" at Canton.

The Houses of Several Europeans Burned—The Occupants Seek Refuge on Vessels in the River—Military Called Out and Rioters Dispersed—A Card From McDermott.

LONDON, September 11.—A dispatch from Hong Kong states that a Chinese mob at Canton burned the houses of several Eurepean merchants, and also their wharves, causing great consternation among foreign residents, most of whom sought refuge aboard of vessels in the river. No violence was offered these persons, and a force of Chinese troops was called out, which quickly dispersed the rioters. On receipt of the intelligence at Hong Kong several gunboats were immediately sent to Canton to afford protection to foreign merchants.

M'DERMOTT'S STATEMENT.

LIVERPOOL, September 11.—James McDermott is in custody on a charge of being connected with a dynmite conspiracy. He was brought before the court to-day, but was again remanded, owing to the fact that the case for the prosecution was not complete. McDermott at a previous hearing furnished the following document, with a request to the press to print it, "I am not permitted to see any newspapers, and am consequently ignorant of what is going on in the world outside my cell door. I have just been informed, however, some person named James Malley, and stating himself a refugee from Cork, has been ventilating his opinions in America through the press concerning me. Now I don't know and never heard before of Jas. Malley. That he is a fugitive from justice is not only possible but probable, but in claiming to be a political refugee from Cork or elsewhere in Ireland, there is no doubt that James Malley is a mendacious liar and dangerous imposter.

Chicago Notes.

CHICAGO, September 11.—The boom corn market, which experienced a decline yester day, suffered a reaction to-day and heavy speculation indulged in by outside customers in anticipation of a sharp rise in prices, has apparently resulted disastrously for them. The market displayed signs of weakness from the opening, outside buying orders having fallen off. Prices fell back very nearly to where they stood Saturday. Oats were steadier as compared with yesterday. Corn, though, was shaded off slightly. Wheat also showed a decline under yesterday's quotations.

A special telegram from Vincennes, Ind., says: J. C. Bedell. who represented the commission house of McCormick & Bedell, Chicago, has disappeared, leaving an indebtedness of $5,000. The Chicago firm says it is in no way affected by Bedell's going, as his relations with them were not of a character which could involve them in any way.

U. S. Treasury Department.

Major Adams, the United States pension agent stationed at Topeka, Kansas, is now drawing and paying all pension monies through the St. Louis office. Pension checks were formerly made through the New York office, but now all are drawn on the department in this city. This has augmented the local work in the treasury, as Major Adams draws nearly a million of dollars for pension purposes quarterly. Yesterday 1,002 checks were made on the department. It is claimed, however, that it is far more convenient to pay these checks on the banks, as it saves the necessity of identification. The quarterly payment system commenced at the St. Louis office on the 4th of September. Quite recently an amusing incident occurred, which bade fair to ripen into a moral. A blind pensioner accompanied by his wife, and a gentleman who was to identify the parties, entered the building and approached the cashier's desk. Some $9,000 was due as pension money, as the law allowed the pay from the time the disability occurred. Being somewhat nonplussed at the amount handed him, the pensioner remarked that he "didn't want to spend it all before he left town." Mr. Edwards suggested the wisdom of putting it in some local bank. The idea seemed to strike the man as a bright one, but his wife, whose idea of a bank had not reached maturity, suggested a more plausible plan. Seizing the money and carefully dividing it, she stored it in her stocking, and walked out of the building with the confidence of a woman who believed in the old saw with a vim: that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

THE MAGIC "SCOOP."

How a Tall Blue-Coated Fairy Helped the Republican Out.

Next to finding Mary Churchill herself the hardest task seems to be to find anything new about her. Reporters on the Republican can lift their right hands out of their pants' pockets and swear to this. The whole force of news-hunters belonging to that establishment sat at short distances from each other along the curbstones reaching between the Globe-Democrat and Republican offices at five o'clock this morning and there was sadness in their faces and sleepiness in their eyes.

"What does this mean?" asked a POST-DISPATCH elf who was out that early untangling the thread of the night's latest news.

"Why, don't you know?" said a tall policeman, who was engaged in keeping the young men on the curbstone awake, "that is the Republican's special Two-for-a-Dime Transcontinental Telegraph Bureau, established for the particular purpose of chasing down the latest clew in the Churchill case."

"You don't tell me?"

"I do."

"I thought I heard the press going," said one of the straw-hatted and somewhat dudefied relay, nearest the Globe-Democrat.

"No, no;" interposed the tall policeman, "that is not the press. It is the snoring of the poor, tired city editor up-stairs sleeping on his desk for the few brief minutes allowed him between each day's work."

Soon the stentorian music swelled and through the dimly-lit windows of the "local room," the figures of nodding youths, deep-breathing in their sleep, could be seen swaying like the slumbering rose on the cradling breezes. The scene reminded me forcibly of the fourteenth float in the coming Veiled Prophet pageant, "The Sleeping Beauty," the only difference being that the reportorial sleepers awoke every few minutes and laughed a loud guffaw at the dozing crew on the curbstone below.

"Not until 8 o'clock!" someone cried from the window, and the youths on the curbstone immediately curled themselves up for a much-desired snooze.

The angel of night, ere he cleared the east of his skirts, brushed the eyelids of the drooping news-hunters with his wings, and while they hearkened to the spirit music of phantom-land the tall policeman took pity on them, went into the G.-D. cellar and got a copy of the morning paper and carried it over to the Republican office.

An hour later the newsboys were shouting "Hyere's yer mornin' 'Publican, all 'bout findin' Mary Churchill!" The sleepers on the curbstone awoke. Likewise those in the Globe-Democrat office.

"Ha! ha!" shouted the former.

"Oh, h—l!" remarked the latter.

It was in this way, by a 6-o'clock-in-the-morning special curb-stone wire from Fourth and Pine, the Republican got its first and only reliable news about the story of Miss Churchill in El Paso.

The few people who read the special dispatches from Chihuahua and other Mexican points in this morning's Republican now learn for the first time that a tall blue-coated fairy sneaked the magic "scoop" out of the G.-D. cellar. The altitudinous hero of this journalistic nursery tale should be made Magoogin's side partner in the literary bureau of the Police Department.

The Water Works Investigation.

The Slevin Investigating Committee of the House of Delegates met yesterday afternoon, to continue the Water Works investigation. President Flad appeared before the committee and explained the trouble about the coal furnished by Hazard & Wilson. He said that Cnaphe complained of the coal. Mr. Whitman examined it and saw it was not good. A committee of experts, however, examined it, Flad admitted, and reported that it was a fair sample of Illinois coal. Mr. Flad denied that cold water had been put in the boilers or that the gauge had been put back. It was sworn to by Mr. Badger. The witness produced voluminous documentary evidence. Mr. James Collins, one of the experts who examined Hazard & Wilson's coal, testified before the committee that the coal was good. Mr. Hazard also appeared before the committee.

BLESSING'S BUTCHERY.

Thieleman, His Brother-in-Law Dies of His Wounds.

A Horrible Tragedy Last Night—A Crazed Husband's Attempt to Murder His Wife and Her Brother and Then Kill Himself.

One of the most ghastly crimes in the history of St. Louis was enacted at No. 1451 Cass avenue at 11 o'clock last night. The house is a tenement building, occupied by a number of families. Three rooms on the third floor have been rented and occupied by J. B. Blessing, a steamboat engineer, his wife and his wife's brother, Mr F. Thieleman. Blessing's avocation called him from home a great deal and his absences were rendered less tiresome by the presence in the house of her brother, who, from all accounts, was a most quiet and orderly young man. Blessing married his wife about five years ago; he is 48 years old and she is only 23. For some years the couple have not lived happily together and the husband, from all that his neighbors and acquaintances say of him, was of an exceedingly jealous and erascible temperament. Frequently of late he has forbidden his wife to receive company of either sex, and her movements out of doors were so many provocations to his angry spirit.

MRS. BLESSING,

who is a pretty woman, is also exceedingly ladylike and reserved in her manners, and those of her neighbors who have known her longest are unanimous in their statement that so far as their observation of her conduct has enabled them to judge her husband's jealousy of her has been utterly groundless. He was jealous of her, however, and his periodical visits to his home were always rendered unpleasant by his violent outbreaks of jealous passion. Once or twice she threatened to leave him unless he amended his manner towards her, and then he would subside for awhile only to break out into a fresh rage whenever he thought the occasion favorable. Blessing has not been at work since August 20th last, his last engagement having been as engineer on board the steamer Ste. Genevieve. On the latter date he treated his wife to a more than usually stormy scene, forbidding her peremptorily, once for all, from ever having any conversation with young gentlemen or ladies either in the house or on the street. It may readily be understood that the incessant quarrels between Mr. and Mrs. Blessing were anything but pleasant to young Thieleman, and he would have left his sister's home long ago but for the consciousness that she might at any time that her husband happened to be in the house stand in imminent need of assistance. Yesterday Blessing loafed around the neighborhood in which he lived all day. When he came home in the evening he was in a very surly mood and full of bad whisky. After supper he went out alone, and when he returned he demanded of his wife why she also had left the house in his absence. The poor woman replied that she had got tired of sitting indoors and had merely taken a walk in the neighborhood, without even putting on her hat. He was lying on the floor with his clothing on and when Mrs. Blessing asked him to get up and undress for bed he refused, and then she threatened to compel him to do so. One word brought on another, and suddenly the man made a grab for the woman, flourishing a large 38-caliber British bull-dog revolver about his head. Mrs. Blessing knew that but preserved her presence of mind sufficiently to dash the weapon aside just as it was leveled at her and fired. Thieleman was aroused by the altercation, and fearing that his sister might be harmed rushed in to her assistance. He seized Blessing by the arms and attempted to pinion them just as the latter had got hold of a large and exceedingly sharp-edged razor, which he kept under his pillow. Blessing is tall and quite slender although very muscular, whereas his wife and her brother were of a much slighter and more delicate make, and before they could prevent him he had cut his wife in the left side inflicting a severe though not necessarily fatal wound. The unfortunate woman broke away from her would-be-slayer, and rushed into the adjoining room closely followed by Blessing and Thieleman, the one trying to kill, the other to save her. She shut the door in time and made her escape to alarm the neighbors. Blessing and Thieleman then had the room all to themselves, and almost immediately after Mrs. Blessing had left them together her husband had inaugurated the work of slaughter on another victim. He fired two shots from his revolver at Thieleman, both of which took effect, the first entering the head just below the left eye and the second was fired into his back just beneath his left shoulder. The two men then closed with each other and an unequal hand to hand struggle ensued. Thieleman grew less and less able to defend himself, whereas Blessing, who had not been injured at all, was almost as powerful as before. After he had shot his brother-in-law twice, as stated, he threw his pistol away and went to work with his razor, cutting and slashing Thieleman in any part of his body that was most convenient. Thieleman at length sank to the floor exhausted from loss of blood and his murderer then left the room, taking his razor with him, and climbed the stairs into the attic or loft over head. His course was marked by a well-defined trail of his victim's blood, but before he reached the topmost landing he had not lost a single ounce of his own. The moment he entered the attic, however, he drew the razor across his throat, completely severing the larynx. He fell to the floor and his gaping wound discharged a large quantity of blood. Finding that death did not come got up and walked towards one of the dormer windows with the evident intention of throwing himself through it to the pavement below. For some reason he abandoned this intention and in lieu of it slashed himself across the left arm, intending to sever the radial artery. Once again he used the blade on his own person, the third incision being in the region of the right shoulder. None of his wounds were fatal, and it is quite within the possibilities that despite the gaping wound under his chin he may recover.

While Blessing was trying to put an end to himself his wife had summoned assistance, and at the suggestion of Doctors V[illegible] and Eaton Blessing and Thieleman were removed to the City Dispensary and thence to the City Hospital.

THILEMAN DIED

at the hospital at 6:30 o'clock this morning. His account of his own murder was narrated to the hospital physician during the night, and is exactly as given above. Blessing, who at first was thought to be in a dying condition, rallied towards this morning, and was able to submit to having his wounds sewed up by the hospital surgeons with considerable fortitude. A POST-DISPATCH reporter was a witness to the operation, and although Blessing was not at all able to articulate, he made what he wished to have understood as being his own testimony regarding the tragedy intelligible. It was not difficult to interpret his meaning, and among other things he said, or rather consented to have said for him, that Mrs. Blessing had been the one who had cut her husband's throat. Last night when brought to the hospital, his account was entirely truthful, and he admitted that he had been his own executioner as well as the assailant of his wife and his brother-in-law.

Mrs. Blessing was removed to the St. Louis Mullanphy Hospital this morning.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING AT 1 P. M.

Commencing to-day the afternoon call of the Merchants' Exchange will be held daily, except on Saturdays. The Exchange doors will be opened at 2:30, and the session will close at 3 p. m.——The export clearances from seaboard ports for Europe, from July 1 to September 1, were 10,525,370 bushels this year, against 26,133,349 bushels same time last year.——A late issue of a New York commercial paper says that cash wheat varies but little in price. "Exporters stand off, and receipts have to be taken care of by the local millers and speculators, most of the grain still going in store to be banked against."——The stock of grain in Brooklyn elevators is so large that a considerable amount of corn and oats has been floated to relieve the glut.——Chicago stocks, last evening, were 5,822,873 bushels wheat, 2,270,198 bushels corn. 623,336 bushels oats, 579,207 bushels rye and 22,256 bushels barley. Compared with September 3 these figures show increases of 531,000 bushels in wheat, 142,000 bushels in corn, 20,000 bushels in oats and 42,000 bushels in rye; and, compared with August 28, shows an increase of 807,000 bushels in wheat.——Latest advices from corn growing sections throughout the West and Northwest, are that little, if any, damage was inflicted by the late frost, and that the weather had turned mild and beautiful.

Weakness and depression had possession of the wheat market during most of the early season. Not having a strong corn market to help it, as during the past couple of days, and no encouragement being held out by European advices, prices declined and there was an evident desire to sell shown by most operators. Receipts continued large, especially in the Western markets, as 335 cars in Toledo, 470 cars in Chicago and 107,000 bu here will testify. Early public cables reported wheat as firm and held for an advance, and wheat to arrive as 6d higher, but later and private advices stated that wheat was weak, owing to heavy shipments and no progress being made in making sales. Still later cables gave the decline as 1 shilling. There was no strength shown by the seaboard markets, and Chicago and Toledo both declined considerably. Locally there was a pressure to sell that did not meet enough demand to help the market any, and the consequence was a pretty steady weakening off until late: then the recovery in corn stiffened the feeling some. The close, however, showed declines of 1 1/2@1 3/8c from yesterday's close. The boom in corn seems to have evaporated. The weather was milder here, in Chicago and throughout the Western country. Reports from the corn sections did not confirm the numerous damage reports that were received yesterday. There were large selling orders received here, principally from country points, and local operators were more disposed to sell than they have been. The movement from the country continued large, the receipts in Chicago alone being 888 cars and 33,000 bu. Cables were firm and somewhat better early, but late European advices said that corn was dull and lower. After the noon call there was a reaction, an advance in Chicago caused by shorts buying in strengthening the home market, but the close was 1/4c lower for September, October and November, 3/8c off for year and 3/8c lower for May. Oats let down in price and had more sellers, as other markets were lower, closing 5/8@3/4c below yesterday. Cash grades of wheat were lower and weak, but the demand was active and no difficulty was found in making sales. City millers took a moderate amount, and grades below No. 2 were ready sales for shipment; most of the No. 2 red sold to speculators. Cash corn declined with futures, but the moderate supply was quickly absorbed. The principal demand came from exporters for No. 2 mixed. Cash oats also lower, but in good order demand.

Flour—The market to-day was quiet, and although prices remain without material changed, sales could only be made with much urging and in some instances concessions were necessary, and the trade generally was in an unsatisfactory condition. There is still no export movement, the advices from Europe reporting more favorable weather, but large stocks of old wheat and flour at the principal markets. The inquiry to-day was mostly on home accounts and generally for the best grades, which maintain their own pretty well. Spots continue unchanged, but generally firm and quiet as regards trading. At New York the tone was steady and sales amounted to 2,267 bales. New Orleans firm at 9 13-16 and sales of 350 bales. The local market was also firm, with a small movement of 65 bales, while Liverpool was hardening and generally strong. Futures at all points opened firm at an advance, but fell off as the day advanced and the tendency at the near close was bearish. Liverpool was 2-64d to 3-64d higher at the outset and at the close was reported firm with a less of 2-64d. Yarns and fabrics at Manchester reported steady. Both New York and New Orleans opened at a higher range but almost immediately fell off. At the former the upward movement amounted to 3 to 5 points, and at the latter 2 to 5 points covered the advance. From this prices declined and at 2:30 p. m. were off 2 to 6 points, and 2 to 4 points respectively.

CATTLE.—In many respects the general market was very little different from that of yesterday. The receipts were again small and composed almost entirely of range cattle, which were mostly consigned to one firm, that of Scaling & Tamblyn, who have about monopolized the trade the past two days. Their success in disposing of their consignments, and the prices they have obtained, has proved most gratifying, so much indeed that the owners will give the preference to this market, which, heretofore, they have giving to Chicago. Trading commenced early this morning. Butchers and interior shippers exhibited considerable urgency in their inquiries and paid the prices asked very willingly, and so freely did they take hold that the offerings by noon were almost cleared up. Outside of range cattle the supply was thin, a few cars and mixed lots being offered, but no really good or even fair native steers, which were wanted and would have brought strong prices. It is getting so of late that cattle only arrive in sufficient numbers two days in the week i. e. Wednesday and Thursday, and unless some change is made buyers from the East will become disgusted and desert this market entirely. To-day the receipts were more liberal than usual, but they were all of a kind and the proportion of good was small when the wants of the various class of buyers is considered and could not be made to reach by any amount of stretching. Prices to-day are strong for all descriptions at the following;

HOGS—This market was in a most discouraging condition, and can be dismissed with very few words. Receipts were moderate, but orders for lights were free and hardly sufficient to absorb the offerings which made up the bulk of the offerings. The feeling was very unstable, and the few of this kind that changed hands brought $5 15@5 20. A couple of double-decks of Baltimore hogs of a medium weight also sold at $5 20. Heavies, although slow, were firmer and no change was looked for in these to-day. Sales were mostly to scalpers at $4 85@5 10, and to packers at $4 65@4 85 for rough mixed. Butchers were scarce and bought but little, paying $5@5 25 for the best. Sales published below are small, owing to the fact that a number of transfers were not weighed up in time.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1883.

THE Democracy of Missouri will lose nothing by reading all the JAMES boys out of the party.

THE POST-DISPATCH has an average daily circulation on each day of publication larger than that of any other newspaper in St. Louis.

THE Treasury Department is not a happy family. The Secretary and the First and Second Assistants are all away and yet they cannot agree. Too much intellect is said to be the cause of the trouble.

CLIFFORD LLOYD, the Boycotted Irish Magistrate, has been sent to Egypt to organize an Egyptian constabulary on the Irish plan. This looks as if John Bull proposed to evict the fellaheen from their hovels.

THE JAMES Boys wing of the Democratic party in Missouri is meeting with the tribulations incident to the formation of all new parties, But the JAMES Boys question is a living issue, and the defenders of outlawry must not be discouraged by trifles.

BLAINE is reported as having said that in case BUTLER were reëlected Governor this year, he would be in the field for the presidency next year. BLAINE has been in the field for the presidency himself, and is preparing to sympathise with BUTLER.

THE British Government is determined to help the poor Irish children to homes in America if it takes as much as two dollars apiece to do it. The firmness of the British consols is an indication that the people have no fear of England ruining itself by this lavish generosity.

JOHN C. NEW'S threatened resignation seems to have bulldozed the Administration and he has been pacified with permission to retain his salary and position on a long leave of absence. This means, perhaps, that JOHN, as well as STEVE, has some letters, or is suspected of having them.

THE Republican this morning prints some impassioned utterances from JO SHELBY, the alcoholic witness for the defense in the Gallatin trial. The JAMES Boys party is in need of a metropolitan organ, and the Republican is just about the kind of a paper to meet the requirements of the case.

WE learn from the correspondence of Congressman O'NEILL that there is such an official in Washington as an Acting Supervising Architect of the Treasury, but we do not learn which one of the revenue cutters or naval vessels has been selected by the Supervising Architect for his summer jaunt.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer publishes a three-column double-leaded editorial reading Senator PENDLETON out of the Democratic party. It strikes us that at least three columns more of double-leaded dynamite will be required to get him out. GEORGE has been there so long and is such a heavy-weight, that it will not be child's play to unload him.

OUT of a half dozen or so of cases of combined murder and suicide which have been reported in various parts of the country in the past two months the case of BLESSING is the most appalling and horrible. The poor wretch was undoubtedly insane, but his insanity was clearly due to drink, and his crime is an appalling sermon against the vice of intemperance.

WE must repeat our request to correspondents and all who wish to make use of the Public Opinion columns not to write on both sides of the paper, and not to use more than one sheet, unless absolutely necessary. A great many utterances which are beautiful thoughts and worthy of all attention when briefly expressed become a weariness when drawn out beyond the limits of a concise and handy paragraph.

THE CHARLIE ROSS sensation is revived by the publication of some hitherto suppressed letters, but no light is given on the particulars of the boy's fate. It was but a few weeks ago that a contemporary mystery was recalled to notice by the completion of the vault intended for the remains of A. T. STEWART. The bodies of the great New York millionaire and of the Germantown boy have never been recovered and the future will probably never unveil the mystery which hides them.

THE rivalry between the morning papers of St. Louis is leading to new developments in journalism. This morning when the editor of the Globe-Democrat sought the seclusion that an owl car grants, he had the serene satisfaction of knowing that he had all the news from El Paso that was to be had about the MARY CHURCHILL case. He did not know that his loathsome contemporary was standing on the street corner with a nickel in his hand with which to purchase an early copy of the paper from which the news was transferred expeditiously and inexpensively to the lean columns of the Republican. Some of these days the rivalry of journalism may cause the Republican to order a special and pay for it, but that day is far off.

OUR CUSTOM HOUSES.

From a tabulated statement of the receipts and costs of collection of the customs revenue it appears that out of 130 districts there are 29 in which it costs more than a dollar to collect a dollar. In Atlanta, Ga., the magnificent sum of $21 was collected by the heroic expenditure of $1,068, the proportion of collections to expenses being as 1 to 50. At St. Augustine, Florida, our model Government collected $133, and did not allow its rejoicing over this sudden wealth to be disturbed by the reflection that it cost the people of this country $2,228 to collect it. At York, Me., the Government took in $34 and paid out $312.

What does this mean? It means waste, fraud, extravagance, patronage, spoils and corruption.

What sense or honesty is there in spending a quarter of a million dollars annually on the New Orleans custom house, which collects only two millions?

What do we mean by keeping up a Custom House at Brazos in Texas on the present scale? That custom house collects $52,574 and spends $52,064 to collect it.

The rule seems to be in the small custom houses that no matter what the receipts may be the expenses must be pushed up to the same figure. If a custom house collects a thousand dollars they make a place for some striker at a thousand dollars a year; if it collects ten thousand dollars they get up a ten thousand dollar pay roll. The tabulated statement of receipts and expenses is enough of itself to convict the Government of imbecility.

THE PHILLIPS CASE.

The Republican makes a quibbling effort to defend Judge PHILLIPS' conduct in appearing as counsel for FRANK JAMES, when the statutes make it a misdemeanor in office for any judge of a court of record to practice law, excepting only County Court Judges. The Republican begs the question thus:

He is in no sense a judge and exercises none of the functions of the judicial office. He has no voice in any decision of any court. The power to render a judgment is of the very essence of the judicial office. It is palpable, therefore, that Mr. PHILLIPS' appearance as counsel in any case does not affect the judiciary. The constitutionality of the law establishing a commission rested on the fact that the functions of the commissioners were not judicial, and that no new tribunal, or additional judges of any then existing, would be created by it.

It is true that the number of Supreme Court Judges could not be increased without amending the Constitution, which would have taken years when the Court was already far behind with its business. It is also true that the statute creating the Supreme Court Commission was carefully drawn with a view of evading the constitutional restriction upon the number of judges, and hence the pretense of calling the additional judges by the title of Commissioners, and otherwise distinguishing between them and the regularly appointed Judges.

But it is also true that these Commissioners were appointed to render strictly judicial services which the Supreme Court, for lack of Judges, could not perform. The help the court asked for was strictly in the line of its judicial duties, labors and responsibilities. It did not ask for clerks or bailiffs. It complained that the bench was not strong enough to perform all the judicial work devolved upon it. In providing for the appointment and pay of three additional men to do this judicial work, the act required that they should have the same professional qualifications as Judges of the Supreme Court, and should examine and decide such cases as might be referred to them by that body, their decisions to stand as the decisions of the Supreme Court, unless it should choose to review the work and reverse the decisions of the Commission. As the Commission was created to relieve the Supreme Court, it is plain that the cases referred to the Commissioners will be decided by them, or else that the relief they afford to the court will be no relief at all.

If Hon. JOHN F. PHILLIPS is not drawing a liberal salary from the State Treasury for performing a part of the judicial labor of the Supreme Court, then he is drawing that salary for doing nothing. The reason of the statute forbidding judges to practice law applies to him with as much force as to any judge on the bench, and with peculiar force in this JAMES case, where he arrayed the prestige and influence of the Supreme Court over judge and jury on the side of the prisoner and against the prosecuting attorney.

MAHONE'S WATERLOO.

Not long ago the Virginia Readjusters were firing big guns over a decision of the United States Supreme Court, and the Funders seemed to be left without a leg to stand on. But now comes Judge BOND, of the United States Circuit Court, with a decision which puts the Funders on their feet again, plays havoc with the Readjuster enactments and threatens the Readjuster administration of the State with a siege of troubles.

By the Funding act of 1871 Virginia compromised with her creditors, exchanging about twenty million dollars of new bonds for thirty million dollars of old ones, and provided that the interest coupons of the new bonds should be legal tender for "all taxes, debts, dues and demands due the State." The Readjusters attacked this settlement as unfair and onerous. They contended that, according to all international rules and precedents, the partition of Virginia partitioned her debt; that it was morally and legally right for her to repudiate West Virginia's just proportion of the old State debt. They finally coalesced with the Republicans and got into power by promising to extort from the bondholders a readjustment much more favorable to tax-payers. In 1882 they succeeded in enacting a law which, after alleging that spurious bonds and coupons were in existence, prohibited treasurers and collectors from receiving any one of the 1871 coupons until its genuineness had been established by the holder in a court of law. The Funders and bond-holders denounced this as an unconstitutional law, impairing the obligation of a contract, and also practically repudiating the consideration for which the debt had been scaled. But in a case which was taken up, the United States Supreme Court held that, as the new law, while destroying the remedy by mandamus, substituted another instead, it was not unconstitutional. The Court, however, took care to state that its decision went no further, and that it was not deciding the question "whether the tax-collector is bound to receive the coupons notwithstanding this legislation."

Upon this hint another proceeding was begun in the United States Circuit Court, and Judge BOND has decided that the coupons are a legal tender for all taxes and debts due the State, and that if the State officers refuse to receive them no levy can be made on the tax-payer's property for taxes he has offered to pay in coupons. It is believed that this decision will be sustained by the Supreme Court, because the latter, in the former case, intimated that the State's contract with the bondholders was inviolable, and that the tax-collectors who refused to receive these coupons must do so at their own risk.

The immediate and inevitable effect of this decision is to involve Gov. CAMERON and his Readjuster Legislature in manifold financial embarrassments for which they are wholly unprepared. It knocks their State platform into smithereens, and leaves little BILLY MAHONE with his toy balloon collapsed, and no means of descending gracefully from his bad eminence.

ALL attempts to make the Democrats of Western Missouri solid for the defense of the JAMES boys have failed, and failed disastrously. The old split on this question in the Kansas City district has been patched over for the present, and now the same old trouble breaks out in the St. Joseph district. Mr. GEO. E. KING, who on the 15th of June took charge of the St. Joseph Gazette in company with Maj. EDWARDS, has withdrawn on account of the Gazette's course with reference to the JAMES trial. He says:

I was not in sympathy with the work in which the Gazette was engaged. I have charity and friendship for the people of the lost cause, but at this late date don't choose to discuss or be their champion. I have always been for the supremacy of the law, but the final and chief cause of my withdrawal was in the fact that the Gazette, in spite of all my efforts, espoused the cause of the Gallatin outlaw, and is the apologist, if not the organ of the James boys, and I just simply chafed and fretted until liberty and freedom from the establishment was my greatest desire, and I have retired from it because I was distressed at its work.

This is the feeling of a majority of the Democrats of every county in Missouri, and unless this feeling is recognized and respected by the party leaders and organs there will be trouble.

A SPECIAL to the Chicago Times from St. Joseph says that Maj. JOHN N. EDWARDS, of the St. Joseph Gazette, who negotiated the surrender and introduced FRANK JAMES to Gov. CRITTENDEN, asserts confidently, if not officially, that Gov. CRITTENDEN will never give FRANK up to the Minnesota authorities. The Governor's reply to the Minnesota requisition, says Maj. EDWARDS, will be in these words:

"This is the closing up of the war. I said I would break up this gang, and I have done it; all the rest of them are either dead or in the Penitentiary, and I can afford to let this man go, for we need have no further fear of him."

We cannot say whether Maj. EDWARDS speaks by the card, or only from a belief that Gov. CRITTENDEN would be swayed by the same political influence which made a representative of the Supreme Court appear as counsel for FRANK JAMES in violation of a statute. The Cincinnati Enquirer also asserts that the Governor would have pardoned FRANK, if convicted, and that such a pardon would have been more disgraceful than the verdict of acquittal. It is possible, however, that these "knowledgeous" editors are mistaken in their estimate of the Governor.

The Union Medicale, an ultra-scientific medical journal of Paris, has been investigating the connection between color and sound. It says a sharp note produces a bright and a flat note a dark impression of color. Music from different instruments gives different chromatic sensations. A melody on the saxophone, for instance, gives the idea of yellow; the clarionet, red; the piano, blue. The human voice produces yellow, green, red and blue. It is a great pity that WAGNER died before these discoveries were made public, as they were the one thing needed to demonstrate his Idea. It was not harmony of sound that he sought in his composition, but harmony of color. His memory is thus vindicated, and Mr. WHISTLER'S nocturne in blue and gray becomes, of course, a duet of piano and harp. Science is a great thing if it gets started off on the right foot.

EX-GOV. PHELPHS' former Secretary, the editor of the Sedalia Democrat, pauses in the work of whooping up "that grand old statesman" long enough to say this about the FRANK JAMES verdict:

It was right. It was the justice of heaven. It was the mercy of God that tempered the winds of prejudice to the shorn lamb. Frank James was not in the Winston train robbery, and had nothing to do with the cruel murders of that dreadful occasion. Frank James is not a bandit, nor a train robber, nor a murderer.

How the ardent Sedalia editor managed to conclude a leader in this vein without ratifying "the justice of heaven" by nominating FRANK JAMES for some office on the ticket with PHELPS is unaccountable. Governor PHELPS' organ has nominated nearly all the prominent Democratic favorites lately, and FRANK'S escape in this instance is harder to explain than his escape at Gallatin.

IT is announced upon the authority of a prominent official that a complete list of the forfeitable land grants will be laid before the next Congress and that the Interior Department will strongly recommend the passage of an act declaring them forfeited. They amount to about 138,000,000 acres and are worth more than all the outstanding United States bonds. Consequently it is also announced that HUNTINGTON, VILLARD, SHARON, CROCKER, MILLS, STANFORD, BILLINGS and other great millionaires and subsidy sharks are making arrangements to spend the winter in Washington. It remains to be seen whether the virtue of Congress can resist this mighty array of gilded influence.

BEFORE the Senate Committee on Education and Labor yesterday a witness expressed his opinion that no man should be allowed to have an income of more than $25,000 a year. If a man can make the money honestly no one has a right to put any limit on his income. What galls the poor men of this country, however, is the thought that the gigantic fortunes which are peculiar to this age do not represent the just rewards of honest work, of superior ability or enterprise. They represent the abuse of corporate rights, the corruption of legislative bodies, the degradation of the judiciary, subsidies, land grants, fictitious stock issues and other infringements of the pecuniary and legal rights of the people. That is the objection of the people to big incomes, and it is a valid objection.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 11.—The World says: "It is to be hoped that the honest indignation of the people against the intolerant and overbearing policy of the Republicans will prove strong enough yet to elect Judge Hoadly, who is one of the purest and ablest men in the country; represents Democratic principles and is the nominee of the party. But it is unfortunate that Democratic folly should have cast even a doubt on the result of the canvass."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "Yesterday another pension office clerk was recommended for dismissal by the commissioner. His offense was the one for which some of his fellow-clerks had already been discharged, namely, informing a confederate outside the office in regard to claims that were about to be granted, in order that this confederate might secure a fee from the applicant by pledging as a return for it an early and successful settlement of his case. How many pensioners during the last ten or twenty years have been defrauded by this mean swindling?"

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "Notwithstanding the record which Butler has made as Governor and the apparent absence of division among his opponents there seems to be a feeling that his defeat will not be an easy matter. The Republicans will need to put forth all their strength, and none of it will be wasted, even if it should prove that something less would have accomplished the purpose. If they carry out their determination of putting their very best men on the ticket there can hardly be a doubt of the result."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "The recent frosts have undoubtedly injured the corn crop in the extreme northern localities in which it is planted, but before any one sells his property or mortgages his salary to get money with which to 'operate' in corn through brokers in the Produce Exchange, he should try to realize that by far the greater part of the corn in the Union is below the limits of the late frosts."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "Mr. George Blair, manufacturer of packing boxes, yesterday gave the Senate Committee on Labor and Education his idea of the way to solve the intricate problems of labor and capital. A great point would be gained, he thought, if nobody were allowed to have an income of over $25,000 a year. This may be, but we think that if our leading dry goods men were not permitted to enjoy an income of more than $25,000 each they would not be able to buy so many of Mr. Blair's packing boxes as they do now."

POLITICAL DRIFT.

THE old ticket and the old barrel are good enough for some.

AFTER all, it was not the cowboy, but Villard, who captured the President.

SECRETARY CHANDLER is said to be committed to the support of President Arthur for a second term.

THE Philadelphia Press takes occasion to remind John C. New that an office in Washington is worth two nominations in Indiana.

IT has just occurred to the Republican managers in Ohio that Judge Hoadly went to the doctor, not the doctor to Hoadly, and they begin to fear that he may not be so very ill after all.

GEN. GRANT is reported to have expressed the opinion, on his Western trip, that President Arthur will not be renominated, and could not be elected if he were, owing to his inability to carry New York. When the President hears of this he will perhaps whistle softly to himself: "Roscoe and I are out."

A STORY is told of a certain political caucus in Maine which was attended by only two persons, Hannibal Hamlin and one other. Mr. Hamlin elected the other man chairman, and proceeded to transact the business in hand. But the credentials of the delegates certified that they were elected at "a large and respectable caucus of the Republicans of ——, because," as Mr. Hamlin explained to the puzzled chairman, "you are large and I am respectable."

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Where the Readers of the Post-Dispatch Get a Hearing.

ST. LOUIS, September 10, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I wish to call the attention of your valuable paper to that most unscrupulous of all unscrupulous monopolies—the Laclede Gas Company. If the quantity and quality of gas furnished throughout the city is similar to that between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets on Lucas avenue, the sympathy of a sufferer is extended to each and every Laclede gas burner in the "Future Great." The gas has never been satisfactory, and I suppose never will be, but for the past week it has been even more execrable than formerly. At one time my inexperience did not deem this possible—I have discovered my mistake. Last evening about 9 o'clock, the feeble, wind-burdened gas flittered fitfully, and we could all see that it was dying slowly—dying by inches, or rather by fractions of inches. Lower, lower it sank; our whispering voices ceased; scarcely a breath disturbed the air. That suspense was terrible. When would death come, and how? We half expected to see one last, desperate, unsteady flare before the end. But, no; we were mistaken. Slowly, calmly, peacefully, lingeringly it sank away, and we, sitting there, knew not of its departure, until a ring at the door-bell roused us from our meditation. Somebody suggested candles—most happy thought. Our long, white friends were brought in, introduced to a lighted match, and conviviality reigned supreme. The improvement was marked. Will you please give the names of the Directors of the Laclede Gas Company. Is it a pertinent question to ask if they look like scamps?

Water-Works Testimony.

ST. LOUIS, September 11, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In reply to the statement made by Col. Flad as to the cause of my discharge from the Water-works, it is a falsehood. I never was discharged for being drunk, and in regard to the running of coal test, it was by Mr. Gillespie's advice that I said anything about it. I wrote out the statement and showed it to him, and he said "if the board calls on me I will substantiate every word." Mr. W. Stone was the first one that I spoke to about it. He told me that I must come before the board. A few days after I quit the works I received a communication from the board, requesting me to appear before them, which I did, and there made my statement. After Gillespie had been before the board I saw him, and he said that they did not ask him a question touching on the facts. The real cause of my leaving the works was that I refused to do some fighting for Mr. Chaphe. He told me that if I would bring on a fight between this man and myself that he would give me anything that was in his power to give. The man's name was George Freaken; he is now dead. I refused to do anything of the kind; that is what led to my discharge, as Col. Flad calls it. In regard to the gentleman who was placed there by the board to take the records of the run, I positively assert that he did not know of anything wrong; if he had found it out he would have put a stop to it in short order. BENJ. BADGER.

The Bain Incubator.

FORT SCOTT, KAN., September 10, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In a recent issue you published an article purporting to come from me on the Bain incubator. Allow me to say that I did not write said letter to you, that it is entirely unsanctioned by me and is a rehash of a letter written to me nearly a year ago, and on subsequent investigation I found that the incubator if broader was liable to set fire to the building it was used in, and did set fire to and burn up my chicken-house and destroy my chickens, and that I have not hatched a chicken with it for nearly a year and never expect to use it again, and I entirely repudiate the letter in question, and parties buying the incubator must do so on their own responsibility and not on the faith of that letter.

I am receiving letters from all over the country in regard to this matter, notably from persons reading the POST-DISPATCH, and have taken the trouble to correct as far as I can, having written twenty papers in regard to it, as I cannot answer the hundreds of private letters I receive about it. So please give this card the same prominence you did the other and I think you will subserve the public good as well as relieve me from responsibility. Truly yours,

L. L. JOHNSON.

Municipal Mismanagement.

ST. LOUIS, September 10, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I only hear words of praise and commendation in regard to your expose of the Water-works' mismanagement, and sincerely hope that you may gain the threatened suit, as I have no doubt you will.

Whilst you are stirring up matters so successfully can you not also say something about the street cleaning department? Fifty or sixty thousand dollars are charged every year to that department, and how much of it is spent in cleaning the streets is known to almost every one, and that amount is so very trifling, and so little is done that the city has the reputation of being the dirtiest city on the continent, and I am afraid that the new pavements will not benefit matters. And then there is the gas. Periodically, some individual who terms himself an inspector says that the strength of the gas is twelve, fourteen or sixteen candle, whatever that may mean, and one has to light three or four burners in order to read over the POST-DISPATCH.

It is certain that something is defective either with the inspector or the gas. So stir up the gas and we might find where the fault is. The fact is all of the municipal matters need agitating, and let the good work go on. RICHMOND.

Parnell.

ST. LOUIS, September 8, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Being in want of information I will, of course, apply to the P.-D.: Will you kindly inform me the full name of Parnell, the Irish agitator, also the date of his birth; and any other information regarding him you can unfold through the columns of your valuable paper will be duly appreciated by an IRISHMAN (with a big I).

[Charles Stewart Parnell was born in 1846. He is the son of the late John Henry Parnell, who was at one time High Sheriff of the County of Meath. His grandfather was the last Chancellor of the Exchequer of the Irish Parliament, and a bitter opponent of the union. His mother was the daughter of Admiral Stewart, of the U. S. Navy. Soon after finishing his education at Magdalene College Cambridge, he was elected, in 1875, at the age of 29 years, member of Parliament for Meath, and he represented this constituency until 1880. In 1877 he was one of the seven members of the party who tried to extort concessions from the Government by systematically obstructing the business of the House.]

Public School Reading Room.

ST. LOUIS, September 11, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The officials intrusted with lighting the Public School Reading Room do so according to their narrow views of economy.

If they see only a few persons in the reading room (and generally at the time of lighting such is the case) they light but few lamps, hence, when others come in, there is no provision made to light more, and gradually one by one they withdraw. The saloons in the city on the contrary attract by their gay chandeliers, resplendent with light, and if there is no one at the bar the lights keep the saloon-keeper company. I know of but two public reading rooms, the one above mentioned, the other the Y. M. C. A., on Eleventh and Locust streets. This last has plenty of lights, is a cheerful place, but is a jumbled up mess as regards keeping any sort of literature on hand. Its library shelves are kept shut up, and what magazines there are have a way of diving in all sorts of out-of-the-way places. It is easy to make an appearance, but it requires tact, generous devotion to literary aims and purposes, to aid the elevation of the race through the means of public institutions, with others of the character above referred to.

Kansas City Described.

ST. LOUIS, September 7, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Glancing over your issue of yesterday (September 6) I noticed a little article concerning Kansas City, in which the writer speaks of her as "Virtuous Kansas City." I know she is anything else. I, a lone woman, have tested her, and if I had the ability I would write her up (the city and people), for there never was a more abandoned or unvirtuous city. I have tested it thoroughly. My husband's last request was for me with my little daughter to remain there. But I found it utterly impossible to do so. I was watched and annoyed by not only one, but a score of the most prominent of her best citizens, or at least those who were considered such. The fact is, I was actually driven away from the city by their conduct. The men in St. Louis are a hundred per cent better. In fact, there is no comparison between the two cities for virtue, for of all the cities I have ever been in for down-right meanness, it ranks first. Write it up. You cannot say too much.

Yours, truly, MRS. P.

The Hoodlum Wagon.

ST. LOUIS, MO., September 11, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you please answer the following question in your lively paper; Provided a citizen is under arrest and willing to walk peaceably to the nearest station-house can he be compelled to be exposed to public view by riding in a hoodlum wagon? As I understand it a police officer's instructions are only to use necessary force when occasion requires same. AN EX-OFFICER.

And subscriber to your excellent paper.

[The Chief and Vice-President of the Board say that where the wagons are in operation an officer is not expected to leave his beat, and every one arrested there must go to the station-house in the hoodlum-wagon.]

The Police Are State Officers.

ST. LOUIS, September 10, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please cast the light of your wisdom on this question. B contends that our Metropolitan Police force are both city and State officers, and that they have jurisdiction to make an arrest in any county of our State, while W contends that Metropolitan, as applied to our police force, is a misnomer; that there is no statute law making them State as well as city officers, and that if "one of the finest" was ordered outside of the city limits to make an arrest he would be justified under the law in refusing to go. Which is correct, B or W? Yours, Z.

[B is right. A St. Louis officer can make an arrest in any part of the State.—ED. P.-D.]

Our Murderous Streets.

ST. LOUIS, September 10, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

To-day we have to mourn for another brave fireman. If you keep Gen. Turner for many years longer, assisted by Flad and Whitman, those who are not dead will have to sell out. The streets are terrible. Charge those deaths to Turner.

WORKINGMAN.

Capitalist Organs.

From the New York World.

If the laboring classes actually believe that the press of this country is subsidized by capital, the question is, Are they wholly mistaken? Are they entirely wrong?

They certainly are, if they believe that the proprietors of the papers in this city, for instance, receive a direct subsidy in cash. They are not paid for their opinions as the serpent-press is paid in Germany, or as the official press is paid in Russia and Spain and Italy and Mexico. They certainly are not subsidized in that way. But are many of them not influenced by the interests of capital, of wealth, of privilege and monopoly and corporate profit?

A newspaper conductor with an income of a quarter or half a million a year or more, with yachts, town houses and country houses to keep up, with an intimate circle of millionaire friends to entertain and be entertained by—above all, with a surplus income which must be invested and which naturally goes into bonds and stocks and other securities of corporations and monopolies—which side would he be apt to drift into? Is he likely to be eager and zealous and earnest in resisting the encroachments of monopoly and the money power, in defending the rights of the common people?

There is no paper in this city that is subsidized. But there is one not controlled nor in any way swayed or influenced by the side of capital. It is perfectly free, completely independent, wholly untrammeled. It has deep and sincere convictions, and they are on the side of the many rather than the few—on the side of the people. That is The World.

A paper for the millions rather than the millionaires, is our motto.

A Look Ahead.

From the New York World.

We will not mar the rejoicings over the completion of a new link in the great railroad chain by contemplating the possibilities of a situation which includes 300,000 miles of railroad with $30,000,000,000 of stocks and bonds and water. The next generation will need a very able-bodied race of statesmen to grapple with the railroad question as it will present itself to them.

An Ancient German Hostelry.

From the London Daily News.

The proprietor of the Hohe Lilie Inn, at Erfurt, has placed tablets over the gateway, bearing inscriptions to the effect that the following persons have resided in the house: 1341, Duke Christian of Brunswick, Archbishop of Bremen; 1541, Landgrave Philip of Hesse; 1543, Duke Maurice of Saxe; 1543, Dr. Martin Luther; 1631, Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden; 1817, Frederick William, King of Prussia.

About the Size of It.

From the New York Times.

Why Jay Gould should have been summoned before the committee does not clearly appear, if the committee has any other object than to supply miscellaneous information to Senator Blair. It is not for us to say that that statesmen does not need all the information that can be imparted to him; but this process of educating him at the public expense threatens to become tiresome as well as costly.

A Puzzled Poet.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

At Aldworth a haggard-looking man has thrown aside his clay pipe, and is swaying backward and forward, dragging his fingers through his hair, and repeating to himself, "Brown, town, down, gown, clown, crown, gown, town, down, Brown, clown," etc. It is Alfred Tennyson, Poet Laureate, and he is trying to get up a poem on the late lamented faithful servant of the British Empress.

Maternal Reasoning.

From the Courier-Journal.

Old Mr. Ploggers, indignantly—"Look here, Mrs. Snags, this is twice that boy of yours has thrown rocks at me! It's about time you ought to know how he is going on!" Mrs. Snags—"Yes, Mr. Ploggers; but you know, Ploggers, there are other boys who throw rocks! It isn't my boy alone!"

A Truly Good Man.

From the Chicago News.

We are inclined to think that the jury made a serious mistake in not incorporating in their verdict the statement that Mr. Frank James was the author of "Baxter's Saints' Rest" and "Taylor's Holy Living and Dying." This would have made Mr. James solid with the literary people of Missouri.

Gould Not Likely to be Canonized.

From the Trenton Times.

Jay Gould's evidence is a romance indeed. Yet, despite his tears when on the stand and the pathetic touches he gave the narrative, Jay Gould is a cold, unscrupulous, mercenary millionaire. It is a pity that his record was not a more humane one.

Precious Water.

From the Boston Herald.

Jay Gould proposed his willingness to sell the Western Union to the Government for a "fair price." When pressed for an approximate idea of what he considers a fair price, he named $100,000,000. We know that a terrible drought prevails, but we had no idea that water had become so dear.

All Cyclones Should Take Warning.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The funniest paragraph yet invented is one to the effect that Phœbe Couzins, the woman's rights girl, was blown away in the Minnesota cyclone. The cyclone that strikes Phœbe will have all it can do to get out of town with a whole hide.

Arthur and Logan.

From the Boston Herald.

Arthur and Logan is the Presidential ticket evolved out of the Chicago "ovation." Too much of a muchness about that. Either name would weight the ticket; together, they would sink it forty fathoms deep.

Exhumation.

From the Philadelphia News.

The only difference between digging up S. J. Tilden's bones and Shakspeare's is that Tilden's have annually been resurrected for so long a time that the people have become used to it.

Very Smart to Say the Least.

From the Newark Evening News.

Whether a grasping monopolist or not, Jay Gould, according to his own story, lifted himself out of the mud by his own suspenders.

Convention of Army Veterans.

The National Convention of the Union Veteran Army will be held at Admiral Du Pont Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., on September 29 next. The object of this organization is to guard the interests of the honorably discharged soldiers and sailors who served on the Union side during the late war, and to secure legislation in their favor. Congress is to be petitioned to give each soldier and sailor as above mentioned a warrant for 160 acres of public land, to equalize bounties, to give a pension to each soldier who was in Confederate prisons, and to secure preferences for ex-soldiers and sailors in the appointments to office. The Pensioners' Benevolent Union of this city will take part in the convention.

Sand Haulers.

The Association of Sand Haulers that has been in existence for some time, and that numbers 150 members, are in trouble. It appears that the two old sand companies are in depressed spirits because the members of the Sand Haulers' Association are patronizing a new company, because the landings of the new company are claimed to be more convenient and their terms are said to be more favorable to the haulers. The price of sand has, during the last year, dropped from a dollar to twenty-five cents a load, and there are rumors of a still deeper fall.

Charged With Slander.

After holding the matter under advisement for two days, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Dierkes to-day issued a warrant charging Mr. Joseph O'Neil, President of the Citizens' Bank, with criminal slander. The warrant is issued at the request of Mr. Hardy, who says Mr. O'Neil called him a "perjured liar." An application was made on last Saturday, but the warrant was refused until to-day, when, after consultation with Prosecuting Attorney Claiborne, it was decided to issue the process.

THE EL PASO STORY.

Is Mary Churchill Across the Rio Grande?

Telegrams Which are Discredited by Her Family—The Caldwell Mystery Still Unraveled—The Smith Disappearance.

Up to noon to-day Col. Churchill had received no confirmation of the report that his daughter had accompanied Caldwell in his flight to Mexico, or that she had been seen in El Paso with him. The Globe-Democrat published a number of dispatches from their correspondent at El Paso, the tenor of which was that Caldwell and Mary Churchill arrived at El Paso at 3 o'clock the morning of the 24th ult., registered at the Central Hotel as man and wife, and later left secretly for El Paso del Norte, which is across the river from El Paso, Texas; that from their suspicious actions they were watched, and that two or three days after their arrival Caldwell procured a pass over the Mexican Central Road to Chihuahua, and, leaving the girl behind him, departed for that town; that the girl immediately took up with a woman of unsavory reputation named Howard, and began a fast life. In all the dispatches there is no positive proof that the companion of Caldwell as Mary Churchill, although they are so worded as to give that impression to the reader. The correspondent states in one dispatch that she answers the description of Mary Churchill, and in another that "she is very much changed, looks very much older, wears her hair back over her head and has adopted fast attire." The girl gave her name as Mary Burns. In a dispatch headed "Confirmed," the correspondent telegraphs a conversation that does not confirm the reports at all. The girl does not say she is Mary Churchill, but that she was happy where she was, and she did not want her people to know the course she had followed.

was looking very badly when a POST-DISPATCH reporter called upon him this morning, and said in answer to the first question that he had no faith in the published dispatches. "In no place," said he, "in the report do I find anything which would lead me to believe that the woman Caldwell had with him is my daughter. They have no means of identifying her there, except by the photographs I sent, and none of the persons sending these telegrams have seen them. Besides, I have in my pocket a letter from the Postmaster at Topeka, stating that Caldwell's clerk had received a letter from him written in Kansas City on the 22d of August. The Globe-Democrat says that Caldwell arrived at El Paso at 3a. m. on the 24th. How could he get over a thousand miles of territory in a day and a half? There is no confirmation in the dispatch headed 'Confirmed.' The man does not ask the person he interviews if she is Mary Churchill, but starts out with the question, 'Why have you not revealed your identity before?' Now, any woman of the character this one is described to be would, just for a joke, pretend that she is Mary Churchill," Col. Churchill said he would not believe the reports until they were confirmed by private dispatches. He sent a telegram yesterday to a young man working in the Mexican Central office at El Paso, who is well acquainted with Mary, to investigate the case and see if the suspected person is really Miss Churchill. Col. Baker, who has done a great deal to assist Col Churchill in securing information from Mexico, is awaiting dispatches from Brooks, the Western Union telegraph manager at El Paso, through whose hands the dispatches must have passed.

"Have you heard anything from Mr. Brooks to-day?" the reporter asked Col. Baker at noon.

"No, I haven't heard a word."

"Are you expecting a message."

"Yes. Brooks telegraphed me that as soon as he obtained any information he would let me have it. From the fact that he has not done so I infer that he has not found out anything. I don't believe the girl is there, for if she were Brooks would know and would telegraph. From his previous dispatches I gather that the woman supposed to be Mary Churchill was in Chihuahua, where she was seen by the person known as Johnson. She is not in El Paso, and the only way Brooks can obtain information concerning her is through Johnson, who appears to be a telegraph operator at Chihuaha. It is likely we will hear something to-day."

THE SMITH CASE.

There is no news of Bertha Smith, who is missing from 2809 Morgan street. Her parents have received no further communications from her, and await with great anxiety her return home.

THE SEVEN.

Futile Attempts to Arrange a Caucus of the Council.

Anybody who will endeavor to hunt down the number of reported conferences between members of the six and members of the seven in the Council, will have a job that will keep him busy at least twenty-six hours every day. Every small politician who sees two members of the Council in conversation starts a rumor about a caucus, which grows as it goes, and soon gets circulated broadcast. Despite these rumors, several members of the council who were seen to-day, denied that there had been any caucus or any attempt at such a thing to-day. It is openly stated, however, that Mr. Jacob S. Merrell, the City Treasurer, has undertaken to settle the matter, and that he has been at work in the field. He is supposed to represent the Mayor, although he has not said so. Treasurer Merrell has called upon Mr. Dan. Houser of the Globe-Democrat, and others, and his object seems to have been to find out what chance there was to secure another conference of the six and the seven, like that held at Druids' Hall. The story goes that Mr. Houser refused to discuss the matter unless Mr. Merrell would enter into written agreements about what was to be done, and would show his written authority to move in the matter. Mr. Houser will say nothing about Merrell's visit, but it was generally known that the above was the result. In the meantime the Mayor says there is no need of any hurry, as the Council does not meet till Friday night. A member of the Seven, who was seen to-day, said that he would be very careful about a caucus, as he had been very badly caught in the last one.

Local Fire Record.

Nos. 1104 to 1112 Collins street, damaged by fire yesterday, is owned by W. P. Townsend and George D. Hall, and is insured as follows: Royal of England $2,500, Shoe and Leather of Boston $2,500, London Assurance $2,500, North British and Mercantile $2,500. Total, $10,000.

At 6:30 p. m. yesterday, Engine Company No. 10, extinguished a fire in the two-story brick dwelling, No. 2621 Walnut street, owned by Mr. Morrisey and occupied by D. Bragman as a dwelling. The fire was in a rear room of the second floor near a grate, and damaged the building about $5. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained. Loss on contents $5.

A fire broke out yesterday at No. 210 North Third street at about 4:30 p. m. The fire was caused by some person dropping a lighted match from an upper window on the cloth awning of the first story, occupied by S. Weinberg. No loss on the building. Insured for $2,000 in the German-American of New York.

Two coal sheds at the rear of the two story brick dwellings, No. 3331 and 3333 Linn street, took fire this morning at 4:18. Loss about $100. Not insured. The rear shutters of the buildings were blistered. The buildings were insured for $2,500 each in the Washington Mutual. The probable cause of the fire was hot ashes.

Delaney's Funeral.

The funeral of Thomas Delaney, the unfortunate fireman who met his death on last Sunday night in the discharge of his duty, took place this afternoon from his residence, 112 Valle avenue, to St. Malachi's Church, Father Zeigler officiating. There were many friends of the family present, and a large assemblage of sympathizing mourners followed the remains from the church to the cemetery. The members of his company, Barney McKernan, foreman; George Thornton, Fred. Kossman, Pat Conway, James Noland, Fred. Butler, John Hoell and Michael Breolin acted as pall-bearers. A detachment of seventy members of the Fire Department were also in attendance. The floral contributions were elegantly beautiful.

The floral contribution from the Hayes Truck Company, No. 3, consisted of a floral ladder, composed of lilies and roses, with a white dove with folded wings on the third round of the ladder. The lines of the ladder were festooned with smilax. On the base of the ladder rested a bank of white flowers with the inscription in purple immortelles, "Hayes Truck, No. 3." There was a beautiful blending of delicately tinted lilies with the white roses. The contribution of Engine Company No. 6 consisted of an anchor resting on an easel, composed of lilies, roses, jasmines and other white flowers. The third contribution was a pillow of lilies and jas mines, with the word "Rest" in purple immortelles on the face.

Mechanics' Exchange.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mechanics' Exchange was held at noon to-day in their private rooms. The Exchange is in a prosperous condition, and there has been several accessions to the membership during the past month.

MR. JOHN W. O'BRIEN, St. Louis, Mo., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is very satisfactory to consumers."

THEY STAYED AWAY,

And the Retail Grocers' Exchange Went to the Wall.

The Retail Grocers' Exchange will soon be a thing of the past. It will not be 4 months old until the twenty-first day of the present month. It was started under the most favorable auspices apparently. Elegant quarters were fitted up in the basement of the Merchants' Exchange Building, and for a while it looked as if everything would go on swimmingly. But the customers would not come, and it soon became a joke to say that if you wanted to find a retail grocer you must keep away from the Retail Grocers' Exchange. When a POST-DISPATCH reporter visited the Exchange this morning nobody was present save the Secretary and Mr. John Mueller, the editor of the Retail Grocers' Journal, who has been a warm advocate of the Exchange. The bulletin board announced that 'Change hours are between 9:30 and 11 a. m. It was a little after 10 a. m. at the time, but there were no customers present, and during the half hour the reporter remained nobody came in. The bottles and sheifs, the tables and the rostrum, all looked very pretty, but, unfortunately, there was nothing to look at.

"The thing is at an end," said Mr. Mueller. "We will hold a meeting of the directory, to-night, and it is probable that the place will be closed. In fact there is no reason for keeping it open, at all. Nobody comes here. The retail grocers could not be induced to attend. They could not, as a body, be persuaded to come and do their buying here. Finally, after a four months trial, I think it is pretty safe for you to state that it will be decided at to-night's meeting to close the place up, so far as it is a Retail Grocers' Exchange. This place has been rented for six months, which leaves two months more to run. But the doors will be very probably closed after September 21."

"Will anything else be done in this direction?"

"It is probable that the wholesale dealers will take the place and will form a Wholesale Grocers' Association incorporated, when grocers' supplies, produce, etc., will be dealt in. That is not certain, but it is very probable."

OLD LETTERS.

It seems but yesterday she died, but years
Have passed since then; the wondrous change of time
Makes great things little, little things sublime,
And sanctifies the dew of daily tears.
She died, as all must die: no trace appears
In History's page, nor save in my poor rhyme
Of her, whose life was love, whose lovely prime Passed sadly where no sorrows are, nor fears.
It seems but yesterday: to-day I read
A few short letters in her own dear hand,
And doubted if 'twere true. Their tender grace
Seems radiant with her life! Oh! can the dead
Thus in their letters live? I tied the band
And kissed her name as though I kissed her face.

THE EARL OF ROSSLYN.

AN EAGLE'S EYRIE.

Daring Adventure of a Shetland Island Cragsman.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

Sea eagles were formerly common in Shetland, but, through trapping and shooting these noble birds are now nearly extinct on these northern isles. Within the last three years a pair has established an eyrie in the cleft of a great sandstone sea cliff, known as the Bard of Bressay, forming the southmost point of the Island of Bressay, the Island east of the mainland which landlocks Lerwick harbor. On the east side the cliffs rise sheer out of the sea to a height of 400 or 500 feet. The depredations of the eagles on the farms upon Bressay and the adjacent mainland this year have been extensive. The hungry eaglets required to be fed, and almost daily lambs were missed from the fields. To put a stop to this plundering, a project was formed to rob the nest, and a daring young cragsman—a leader in hazardous adventures—undertook to do so upon the first convenient opportunity.

The risk was great, for besides the peril of the descent and the ascent, there was a chance for a fight with the parent birds. The eyrie could only be seen by the aid of a glass from a cliff on the north side. A considerable way down the cliff is a large protruding bossage—something in the shape of an oriel window, with a great cleft in the middle of it. In the cleft the nest was built. The exact distance of the nest down the cliff was first ascertained. By means of a reel of thread, with a small weight at the end, the measurement was found to be fifteen fanthoms, or about ninety feet. With two assistants the cragsman very early one morning shortly afterwards crossed the Sound of Bressay in a boat. The top of the "Bard" was attained about 3 o'clock. A stout oaken stake having been driven firmly into the ground, through an "eye" at the top of it, one end of a strong manila two-inch rope was passed. The young climber (says the account in the Scotchman, from which the narrative is taken) made this end secure around the body, while his assistants grasped the rope on the other side of the "eye." He had taken off all superfluous clothing, and wore a pair of thin goloshes. In a belt around his waist he had a six-chambered revolver. Over his shoulder was slung his fishing-basket. Going over the brink of the cliff he partially climbed down, so as to take the strain as much as possible off the rope. When he got to the "pond," as the place where the eyrie is built is locally known, he found that fortune had favored him in this—that neither of the old birds was at home; but at the same time he found that it would be a difficult matter to get at the nest. Immediately above the "pond" was a great ledge of rock which completely overhung the eyrie: so that the cragsman, suspended in the air on the same level as the nest, found himself still ten or twelve feet from it. He at once signaled to those above to be hauled up to the ledge; and, that having been done, he cautiously climbed down its face, which had a sharp inward slope, until he got upon the same run of strata as that upon which the nest was built. By following an open seam just wide enough to admit his fingers he managed at last to scramble into the "pond," where probably human foot had never been set before. In the rocky chamber in which he now found himself he could hardly stand upright; he therefore went around on his knees to the back of the nest. There were two pretty eaglets in the eyrie; and when they saw the strange intruder they buried their heads below the woolly lining of the nest, and remained perfectly still. On lifting the eaglets out of the nest, though only a fortnight old, they were so large and well grown that only one would go into the fishing-basket. The cragsman was considering how he could get the other to the top of the cliff, when a warning shout from above told him that one of the old birds was approaching. It was the female bird, which apparently was determined to show fight in defense of her young. She came through the air straight for the eyrie, like a "flash of lightning" so that the cragsman had barely time to throw himself on his back into the deepest recess of the "pond," and to draw his revolver, when the infuriated eagle was upon him. She made one tremendous and unsuccessful swoop at him with her talons and beak, and simultaneously he pulled the trigger of his revolver. The weapon, however, missed fire. The eagle hovered outside for a moment before renewing the attack; but a shot from the revolver—the report of which reverberated among the rocks—effectually scared it to a distance of about 200 yards, where it continued to circle in the air—yelping like a dog. It was by and by joined by the male bird; but neither of the eagles again showed fight. The cragsman, having deposited one eaglet in his fishing-basket, took the other under his left arm, and having given the signal to his companions, swung himself out of the "pond," and was safely hauled up—his perilous venture successfully accomplished. Both of the eaglets are still alive, and appear to be thriving well in captivity. They are fed three times a day on flesh and fish, and on this diet are coming into very beautiful plumage. Since the eyrie was robbed it may be mentioned that the old eagles have on more than one occasion been seen hovering over the town of Lerwick. This is the first time for twenty years that eagles have been captured alive in Shetland.

RATTLESNAKES.

Some Whoppers of the South Missouri Variety.

From the Cape Girardeau Democrat.

A Mr. Barker, living down in the swamp, killed a rattlesnake last week and rendered from the carcass nearly a quart of oil, said to be very efficacious in rheumatic cases.

A party of gentlemen from this city were down in the swamp in Scott county, bordering on the Rock Levee, one day this week, hunting squirrels, when one of them came upon two rattlers, side by side. The gentleman had been standing by a large gum tree waiting to get a shot at a squirrel on an adjoining hickory. The opportunity soon arrived and he fired, killing the squirrel. Simultaneous with the report of the gun his ears were greeted with the warning notes of the crotalus horridus. Looking around he saw two immense rattlesnakes, lying side by side, at full length, but in the act of coiling, preparatory to the deadly thrust, not over six or eight inches from his feet. In an instant the hunter made a spring, and, turning, shot one of the two, blowing its head to pieces; the remaining one crawled into a hollow butt of the gum by which they were lying. The gentleman called to a companion hard by, who came up and dispatched the remaining one. The snake first killed was nearly five feet in length, and on its tail were eleven rattles and a button. The one shot coiled up in the hollow cavity of the tree was a monster. He was fully six feet in length, minus his head and rattles, which were blown away by the shot. It was a close call for the squirrel hunter, and when he realized the dangerous position he was in it made him shudder. Had he made one step backward he would have stepped upon the reptiles and undoubtedly would have been bitten, not a very pleasant thing to contemplate when so far away from an antidote.

VASSAR'S PIE-MAKERS.

What Prof. Ritter Says About the Charming Girl Students.

From the New York Morning Journal.

Prof. F. L. Ritter's genial face shone with a ruddy after-dinner glow at the Leland yesterday. It is his task to guide the hands and voices of the dear Vassar girls in music His eyes sparkled through a pair of Brazilian pebbles as the reporter approached.

"How are all the girls, Professor?"

"Oh, indeed, I can't say; they will not arrive till the latter part of the month." These words were spoken with a German accent just noticeable enough to be charming. At the same time he assumed a more dignified air.

"Which class last year took the prize for the best pies?"

"I don't think they are instructed in baking," said the Doctor earnestly, "but they may take turns waiting at the table, and—" hesitatingly, "I believe they make up their own rooms."

"Isn't it nice to be amid so much beauty, to have such—"

"Oh, it is a mere matter of work with me," with a deprecating gesture, "and when you view anything from that standpoint it is all humdrum."

"But do they make good wives?"

"Ah, my dear sir, I know not, but I suppose they do," and the Professor seemed disposed to change the subject.

"Do you never meet these girls in after-life, when they are making shirts and serving square meals!"

"Our girls are very studious, sir; they have much spirit; they have to work, and those who lag are not thought well of!"

"But don't they get lonesome without the boys?"

"Entertainments are given on occasions during the year at which invited guests appear," said the perspiring professor in a cold tone—our girls are very intellectual."

"Would any of them marry a poor man?"

"Most of our students are young women who wish to prepare themselves to earn a maintenance, but I see no reason why they might not marry a man of meagre income."

"Are they prettier than the majority of the girls you meet?"

"Now you who live in New York and see so many ladies would be able to judge," sighed the professor. "Yes," he continued, "as a class they will take a high rank for persevering, hard-working young ladies. When they first come some seem surprised that they cannot do as they please. At the end of three months they settle down and do splendid work."

"Now, candidly, would they make as good housewives as the German girls do?"

There was an evident mental struggle before the answer came. "Why not? It is my belief that education enables a woman to do anything better; she can see quicker how and when to do anything. Housekeeping should be easy to pick up, and I believe they will do it better than many."

"You think they could give the soup a more æsthetic flavor?"

"They should do everything well."

The instructor did not say whether they would put more intellectuality into dumplings or more berries and less straw in the short-cake, but eulogized Vassar College. The reporter was impressed that every student was unsentimental and unflinching in the pursuit of knowledge.

"What are the privileged occasions when invited guests gather at the college?"

"Founders' Day, in May, and the anniversary of the Philocolocaliolian Society are the two grand events."

"Then they have societies—more or less in the nature of orders?"

"Yes."

"Then they wouldn't object to their husbands attending lodge?"

"They debate with much keenness and vigor of thought, I have heard," said the Professor evasively.

"What are some of the topics of disputation?"

"The Aims of Man, Is Chocolate Injurious to Digestion, and kindred questions in mental science are among those I recollect."

At this point Prof. Ritter mopped his brow and bowed with evident sense of relief as the reporter departed.

He Fought With Garfield.

From the Cleveland Leader.

A Cleveland gentleman who attended the reunion of the Sixty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, held last week at Odell's Lake, Holmes County, met Mr. William Fies, of Marion, who was in General Garfield's command during the war.

"Did you like Garfield as a commander?" asked the Clevelander.

"Oh, yes," was Mr. Fies' reply. "He won the hearts of all of us. As we were pushing on towards Shiloh and the Tennessee River, one day, we went to the commissary for rations. We got our coffee and hard tack, and began to weigh out the 'sow-belly,' when along came Gen. Garfield. He looked around and asked, 'What is in that tierce?' The officer in charge said, 'Hams for the officers' rations.' 'Boys, reach me that axe; let us sample the hams,' said Garfield. A few sturdy blows were given, and the General reached in his hand and began to pull out the hams. The officer remonstrated, but the General said authoritatively: 'Boys, weigh these hams and take them. The government never intended to furnish hams for officers and none for you.' At another time I was on guard at his headquarters. It was a beautiful moonlight night and I was walking my beat in front of his tents, when the General came out and took a seat on a stump. He spoke to me as sentinel, asking to which regiment I belonged and from what part of Ohio I came. I told him, and he asked all about the Rev. S. D. Bates. He said that Mr. Bates was the teacher who partly turned him from the idea of being a sailor on the lakes and persuaded him to attend school. Several years after the war I met Gen. Garfield on the train with Gov. Allen, and he remembered me when I referred to the incidents."

Hangman Marwood's Curse.

From the New York Truth.

Truth's readers will recall that when the Phœnix Park victims were hanged by Marwood, in Dublin, the mother of the youngest—who was really a boy—kneeled on the ground in all the rain, in front of the jail, and called down curses on all concerned in the execution.

Marwood was then in excellent health. Almost immediately he took to drink. This weakened his vitality. At a subsequent execution in England his cunning, that had hitherto been proverbial, deserted him, and he made a wretched bungle of an execution. A few days ago he contracted pneumonia, which to rally from he did not have strength enough, and now is dead.

AMERICAN GIRLS.

Miss Chamberlain, Mary Anderson and H. R. H. the Prince of Wales.

From the New York World.

A gentleman who returned home from London last week says Mary Anderson has had a more cordial reception there than has been given to an American actress for many years. He also tells a story which, if correct, can not fail to increase the respect of the American public for Miss Anderson. It seems that upon her arrival she was invited to some of the best houses in London, and stories were told of her beauty and wit that made the Prince of Wales very anxious to meet her. Miss Anderson was informed of this flattering expression of his royal highness: but, most unaccountably, as it seemed to her English friends, she showed no desire for the presentation. Finally, a gentleman who knew her very well was asked by the prince to say to Mary Anderson that he would be pleased if she would indicate a time when it would be agreeable to her to receive an introduction to his royal highness. She replied that while she wished to show no disrespect to the future ruler of England, she must decline to receive him. Such a reply had never before been made to a request for an introduction by a prince of the blood, and she was asked to explain. "An introduction to the Prince of Wales," she pluckily answered, "can do me no good professionally, and I know very well how he regards actresses generally. Personally, I have always maintained my dignity and self-respect, and I do not mean to put myself in any position voluntarily where I may be compelled to forget them. Therefore I must decline to be presented to him. I have gone this far in life without a breath of scandal attaching to me, and I do not mean now to do anything that might change that condition." This settled the matter. The story got out in London and was widely repeated, and it was noticeable after that that the Princess of Wales invited Miss Anderson to her garden party, an honor she has never before conferred on any actress of the English stage. It is a pity some of the American girls who are getting themselves very much talked about in connection with the Prince of Wales could not follow Miss Anderson's example.

Although the London World hints that the reign of the American beauty is at an end by calling her the "Vice-Chamberlain," "Brunswick," the New York correspondent of the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette, says: "Miss Chamberlain still continues in the graces of the Prince of Wales, and is, I am positively informed, on most friendly terms with the Princess. Friends of her family, who have it from her parents, say that either her father and mother, and generally both, are in the room whenever the Prince calls. He is on the most intimate footing with them, and seems to have taken the whole family into his affections. He admires Miss Chamberlain beyond everything, and tells her friends that she should have been born a duchess—that her manner and bearing is all that the manner and bearing of the highest titled lady should be. When it was reported last winter that the Prince had gone to Cannes to see Mr. Gladstone, that was merely a blind. He had gone to see Miss Chamberlain. Whenever he is in the same place she is he dines with her every day. When he enters the room, the father, mother and daughter rise and make a profound obeisance. Then ceremony is thrown aside, and he is the same as any other man. The friends of the Prince say that he is deeply and truly in love with Miss Chamberlain. If he is, it seems to me the parents of the young lady are playing with edged tools. The Prince of Wales is allowed to be one of the most fascinating men in Europe, and his attentions to a young lady, be she never so much of an American and a republican, are very likely to turn her head. It is said that so far she regards him simply as a friend, and, knowing the nature of American girls, I can well believe this to be true. But supposing it be true now, that is no reason that it will always be true. Miss Chamberlain seems to be in favor with other members of the royal family, as she has recently made a long visit to the Duke and Duchess of Albany. The Chamberlains are well-to-do Cleveland people, and are evidently flattered by the attentions of a Prince, but they had better be wise in time. The friends of the family who told me those particulars say that the father and mother speak most enthusiastically of his Royal Highness. They think that he is the most unsophisticated as well as the most agreeable man they have ever met.

"JUNO."

Death From Cholera of the Heroine of Tel-el-Kebir.

From the Land and Water.

"Juno," the heroine of Tel-el-Kebir, has been carried off by cholera. By a curious coincidence the brave old retriever's master, Coporal Bull, died only two days before of the same disease. Juno was an Irish setter dog belonging to the First battalion Gordon Highlanders. Her first master was Lieutenant-Colonel Vandeleur, and on his leaving the regiment, Juno, who was then serving in Malta, became the charge of a certain gallant sergeant, who, it is said, frequently shared his dinner with her. When the order came for Egypt it was universally decided that Juno must accompany the regiment, and accordingly she went through all the vicissitudes of that campaign, even to the trenches of Arabi's famous stronghold.

There, on the eventful day, she bravely rushed the entrenchments at the head of the Highlanders, and inside displayed a coolness and a courage which elicted universal applause, no more minding the rain of bullets than if she were out snipe-shooting. Whether she tackled the enemy we do not know, the rest we can vouch for. But even if her teeth did not meet in any Egyptian leg her appearance must have spread consternation in the rebel ranks. Here they thought no doubt was one of the 2,000 bloodhounds which Sir Garnet Wolseley was credited with keeping in reserve, and the dauntless pluck exhibited by Juno must have duly impressed upon their timid minds the awful consequences which would befall them if they waited for the arrival of her 1,999 canine comrades.

They did not wait, but bolted for their lives, with Private Juno snapping at their heels, and as the wave of war rolled forward this glorious dog swept over on its crest until its force was spent and the Egyptian army was likewise spent. Such, then, was the gallant achievement which has endeared Private Juno to the Gordon Highlanders for ever. After leading the Gordon Highlanders, and, indeed, the whole British force into Arabi's entrenchments, "Juno" became the recipent of many honors, the last being a silver collar subscribed for at home by some of her English and Irish admirers. This handsome gift reached her shortly before her death. It will now be kept, according to their expressed wish, at the officers' mess, as a souvenir of the battle in which the First Battalion of Gordon Highlanders so greatly distinguisheed themselves.

The Dog Tax in Paris.

From the London Daily News.

From a return just issued by the Direct Contributions Department in Paris it appears that there are some 200,000 dogs in that capital, while the tax is paid only in respect of one-half this number. As the tax varies from five francs a year for a house dog to ten francs for poodles and other pet varieties, the loss to the municipality is very considerable. It has been decided, therefore, that as every dog by law has to be provided with a metal collar marked with the name and address of the owner, in future this collar will, on the tax being paid, be stamped with an indelible mark as a receipt by an official appointed for that purpose.

The officers, however, soon had Martin Hannifas and C. Dalton under arrest and on the way to the station, but followed by a gang of rowdies. At the corner of Sixth street Officer Meyers was knocked down by a rock thrown by some one in the crowd and Dalton for the time made his escape, though Meyers was on his feet in an instant and fired several shots at him. Hannifan, however, was locked up and in a short time Dalton was again under arrest. Their cases for disturbing the peace and resisting officers were continued this morning until Thursday. This morning John O'Heath was arrested, and others of the crowd doubtless will be in a short time.

The St. Louis and Baltimore teams met yesterday, and the former won one of the easiest games they have played this season. Emslie had been spoken of as a great pitcher, but yesterday must not have been a good day for him, as he was rapped around in every direction. The final score was, St. Louis 15, Baltimore 4. Base hits: St. Louis 23, Baltimore 8. Errors: St. Louis 1, Baltimore 7. Nicol made a wonderful record during the game. Out of six times to bat, "Nick" made five hits and five runs. McNicol's umpiring was bad enough, but not so bad as to justify the conduct of the players. First, Comiskey abused him, and next the whole Baltimore nine attacked him at once, so that he found himself in bad odor with both sides. He is the worst umpire St. Louis has seen this season, but the players ought to give him some show, as long as he is in his position.

"More than that, it is a direct violation of law, yet the police seem to take no notice of it. Locust street from Fourteenth street to Ware avenue, Pine street from Seventeenth street to Grand avenue, and as a continuation of these two streets, Lindell avenue from Grand avenue to the Kings highway, are now being remodeled. They are being rebuilt of a composition which renders them as smooth as a floor and as easy to ride over. But it is not adapted to heavy draying. The design of these three streets is to furnish easy driving boulevards, connecting the city with the western system of parks. St. Louis has been fretting and stewing for years over its miserable drives, and yet now that she is having reconstructed these streets that should be a pride to her citizens, such parts thereof as have been completed, are being ruined by the heavy traffic to which they are already subjected.

The Municipal Assembly has passed an ordinance providing that these streets shall be used for light driving and prohibiting heavy hauling thereon, except for a distance of one block, when necessary.

There exists also an ordinance against fast driving upon the public streets, which is being daily violated on the streets mentioned.

As immense sums of money have been expended, and are being expended, upon these streets for the purpose of furnishing to all St. Louis and its visitors beautiful boulevards upon which to drive, is it not time that the haulers of heavy "goods, wares and merchandise" refrain from using and destroying such streets, and that the "bloods" of St. Louis made to select other courses for their racing.
